Show Judges Named

A consultant to the National Gallery of Art and an art professor will judge the 1971 Virginia Beach Boardwalk Art Show during its run July 15-19.

Dr. David W. Scott who has been with the National Gallery in Washington, D. C., since 1963 and Dean J. Meeker who teaches printmaking at the University of Wisconsin will determine the best works exhibited by the expected 450 artists. Awards will be presented July 17.

The show will stretch from 10th to 20th streets and will be open from 1-6 p.m. daily. A few changes have been made in the requirements for the show which is open to all artists over 18 years old. For the first time artists who have not had works selected for judging must accompany their works with representative photographs.

Dr. Scott, who is an author and painter, holds the Ph.D. from the University of California at Berkeley. Prior to going to Washington, he was professor of art and chairman of the art faculty of Scripps College and director of the Scripps College Summer Art Institute. He has contributed articles to several publications including the Encyclopedia Britannica. He has just completed a book on John Sloan and he is the coordinating

Bike Hours Set

The hours for riding bicycles on the boardwalk have been extended to coincide with Daylight Saving Time.

City Council Monday approved an ordinance establishing the hours prohibiting operation of bicycles, tricycles, tandem and other similar vehicles from 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. The new hours are already in effect.

Some "Wood Nymphs" Lost Their Hot Pants

by Les Lehigh

Men of the 2nd Police Precinct are pondering the question of whether they have two charming wood nymphs in their presence, or if two young ladies may have decided to return home from a "skinny-dipping" excursion by traveling secluded nature trails.

These possibilities came into being last Friday morning when officer D. E. Atkins discovered several pieces of discarded female attire while making a routine patrol of his district. Atkins said the garments, which consisted of two "hot pants suits" (tops and bottoms) and two sets of lingerie (bras and panties), were found lying by the roadside at the intersection of Birdneck Road and Prosperity Road.

The garments were reportedly soiled, which could be attributed to normal use, but not torn, damaged, or otherwise showing signs of having been subjected to violent treatment.

Following standard procedure Atkins took the garments to the 2nd Police Precinct headquarters building at 18th Street and Arctic Avenue on the chance that they might be claimed by their rightful owner.

Atkins filed the necessary papers outlining the nature of the "case" which he suddenly became involved in, and returned to the scene of the discovery for further investigation.

IT WAS A HAPPY DAY for Alice Rachel Soles (center) when she was named Little Miss Virginia Beach 1971. The contestants who gave her the toughest competition were Linda

She May Be Small But She's A Beauty

Alice Rachel Soles, a nine-year-old fourth grader at Tranter Elementary School, was picked from a field of 14 girls Friday to wear the crown of Little Miss Virginia Beach of 1971.

Alice, whose piano playing, song and dance drew a hefty round of applause from the Plaza Junior High audience, succeeds Amanda Kimberly Owens at the throne of mini majesty.

First runner-up in the Parks and Recreation Department event was nine-year-old Linda Ann Lukens. Second runner-up was Deborah Jeanette Sanders, six.

Alice played two piano selections, "Castanets" and "The Colored Window," and sang and danced to "I'll Do Anything," from the musical "Oliver." She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Soles of 833 Simpkins Lane.

The new Little Miss Virginia Beach is a Brownie Scout and a member of Virginia Beach Christian Church. Music, reading and swimming occupy most of her spare time.

Alice, chosen by a three-member panel of judges, received a bicycle, a $15 gift certificate at Evelyn's Children's Shop, dinner with her parents at Shore Drive Inn, a straw purse from Miller and Rhodes, six free rides at Seaside Amusement Park and a banner proclaiming her as Little Miss Virginia Beach.

Judges included Miss Marva

Congleton and Miss Sylvia Pond, both former beauty contestants, and Mrs. Beverly Scott, wife of city manager Roger Scott. The pageant was the second sponsored by the Department of Parks and Recreation.

No Council Monday

City Council will not meet Monday since it is a national holiday and all municipal offices will be closed. The next meeting will be July 12 at 10 a.m.

Bay Colony 'Roller Coaster' Protested

Having a "roller coaster" in your front yard is no fun, especially when the riders are between the ages of 16 and 25 and are in automobiles.

Such was the feeling of a Bay Colony resident who appeared before City Council Monday, on behalf of his many neighbors, in protest to the continuing condition of a portion of Bay Colony Drive.

"We have got to have something done on Bay Colony Drive," said William L. McCoy, with a signed petition in hand. "It's way past due."

The stretch of road in question runs from the flashing light at York Lane to the end of the street, where Bay Colony Drive dead-ends at North Bay Shore Drive.

McCoy said he had "walked it and driven it" and it is only six-tenths of a mile but it is hazardous because of the "roller coaster" spots which dip as much as four to six feet. "The manufacturers are building smaller cars that are lighter in weight," McCoy explained, "and the kids go over those hills at such speeds their cars are completely in mid-air."

There had been three accidents on the stretch in the past week, he explained, "and Saturday night some boy thought he was going on to Norfolk and went right through the dead-end into the front of a house."

The police have been very cooperative in patrolling the area, McCoy said, "but they can't be there every minute." He said that between June 18 and June 27 police had issued 13 tickets for speeds ranging from 36 to 80 miles per hour.

McCoy lives at 908 Bay Colony Drive, in the hollow of the deepest dip, and he told council it was hazardous to even back his car out of the driveway "because you never know when a car will come sailing over that hill."

"We must do something to protect the kids driving as well as the home owners," he said. Lynnhaven Councilman Reid Ervin sympathized with the residents and said he realized they had come before council for help several times in the past but that not all of the property owners along the strip would dedicate a right-of-way for improvements to the road.

McCoy explained that one property owner had refused in the past but he had since moved away and all of the owners are now willing to do whatever

Whitehurst—A New Man, A New Party

By David Bohardt

Virginia Beach Sun
Washington News Bureau

A new man with a familiar face and an unfamiliar party is coming to the Beach.

Republican G. William Whitehurst, ex-professor, dean of students and TV commentator, is Virginia Beach's most likely congressman - to - be when the state legislature's new redistricting plan becomes effective Jan. 1, 1973.

He would be the Beach's first GOP representative since at least 1891, when Democrat William A. Jones represented the district in the 52nd Congress. Barring an unexpected defeat at the polls a year from November, Whitehurst will represent the newly-formed second district, which includes Norfolk and the Beach.

Democrat Tom Downing, who has represented the Beach area since 1958, will receive Portsmouth, currently Whitehurst's territory, in exchange for surrendering his Beach constituency. Whitehurst welcomes the switch.

"The beach is a resort area," he observed in a recent interview. "I have not had a resort constituency as such. It is a growing area, while the area I had was not."

However, he said the interests of the Beach were contiguous with those of Norfolk and that the legislature's redistricting, based on 1970 census figures, makes perfect sense.

"The (redistricting) job that was done was a fair one," he said.

Though Beach area citizens represent a new constituency for Whitehurst, he is no stranger to many of them.

An expert in the field of diplomatic and foreign affairs, in which he holds a doctorate degree, he broadcast a well-received program of news analysis and commentary for WTAR - TV from 1962-1968. Many others in the Tidewater region have had some connection with him while he was dean of students at Old Dominion College during the same period.

"The television program unquestionably was a factor in my decision to run," he said. "It gave me the advantage of public exposure."

He was elected in 1968 by voters accustomed to Democratic leadership. His predecessor, Porter Hardy, had served in the Congress since 1946.

"I look forward to serving the Beach and bringing in those federal programs which would prove beneficial," he said of his new future duties.

He claims a fairly successful record in obtaining categorical federal grants for Norfolk and Portsmouth.

"I called officials in Portsmouth and Norfolk," he recalled, "when federal law enforcement assistance funds were available to local jurisdictions." Each city, he said, received a grant under the program.

In addition, he was able to secure Housing and Urban Development funds for the predominantly black Mount Vernon section of Norfolk.

Preservation of the environment also concerns Whitehurst. He has co-sponsored legislation (H.R. 4360) that would protect the ecology of estuarine areas by regulating the dumping of waste materials.

Moreover, a spokesman in his office said the Environmental Protection Agency is moving to enforce existing regulations which would force pleasure craft owners to install holding tanks for human waste and other pollutants.

Human waste pollution now threatens the ecological balance of the eastern branch of the Lynnhaven River and Thalia Creek.

As a former educator, Whitehurst expects to get heavily involved in the education crisis facing the Beach.

In the public controversy over sewage treatment facilities and new schools, the Beach has built neither. Voters last year rejected a $18 million school bond issue, leaving the school system more dependent on federal impact aid funds.

It is the precarious status of the impact funds which has led Whitehurst to entertain reservations about President Nixon's revenue-sharing plan.

Though the state would receive at least $104.5 million under the president's proposal, Whitehurst said some impact funds could be jeopardized.

"I've got to insist," he said, "that adequate safeguards are in there (revenue-sharing) for impact aid." He fears the government may cut off impact

Jaycees Support River Dredging

The Virginia Beach Jaycees late Wednesday afternoon supported the City's efforts toward improvement of the Eastern Branch of the Lynnhaven River. In a letter to Mayor Donald Rhodes and City Council, Jaycee President H. Jack Jennings stated:

At a recent meeting, the Virginia Beach Jaycees voted unanimously to endorse the efforts of the City of Virginia Beach to dredge the Eastern Branch of the Lynnhaven River. As you know, our chapter has been very active in the fight against pollution, as evidenced by our recent support of an effective sign ordinance to curb visual pollution.

Our position endorsing the city's application for a dredging permit with the Army Corps of Engineers is based on our sincere desire to pre-

CONGRESSMAN WHITEHURST

Clown and Evangelist are in Youth Rally

A mass "Rally for Jesus" will begin Sunday at 8 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Jr. High Stadium on 24th Street. And will continue nightly through July 17th.

Evangelist Embury Williams, former Staff-Evangelist of the First Baptist Church, Dothan, Alabama, will be the featured speaker. Embury is at home with young people and wherever he is, young people usually congregate. He is the organizer and director of TEAM, a Christian youth organization that now has spread into several states.

Embury was on the staff of Governor Albert Brewer's Drug Abuse Committee and was honored in 1969 by the Dothan Jacees as the "Outstanding Young Man of the Year". He is a graduate of Samford University and Southwestern Seminary.

Accompanying Williams will be Steve Wade, president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, University of Alabama, where he is presently playing in the position of "safety" on defense. In high school Wade was selected All-American in football and basketball. Steve will be singing with guitar nightly and giving his personal testimony.

Also in the company will be Greg Ellison, Alias "Toddle the Clown" who will be appearing Monday, Wednesday, and Friday nights at 7:30. Toddle serves the Lord in a unique way: Clowning for Christ. With his unusual talents he brings many to know Christ in a most delightful and fun-filled way. Though this clown people realize they can serve the Lord in so many ways and careers. Kids bubble with laughter and so do adults when "Toddle" performs his crazy antics. Then they are fascinated by the way he tells of Jesus and how happy He has made "Toddle".

This summer venture, although begun by First Colonial Baptist Church, seeks to be an inter-denominational "Rally for Jesus" and is being aided and supported by pastors and laymen of all denominations. It is an effort to reach as many young people with the gospel as possible and covets the support of all churches and pastors.

Other highlights of the Rally will be the "Colonials". The youth choir of First Colonial Church which recently returned from a tour of the southland where they experienced a continuing "turning on to Jesus" by over 130 young people.

From Troy, Virginia, and the Beaver Dam Church will come the "Crusaders for Christ Choir". A choir of approximately 40 voices in great demand for such rallies. Young people from as far away as Baltimore will join the effort by singing and witnessing.

An effort is being made to work the rally in cooperation with the other Beach ministries that are in progress. Those interested in assisting may contact Mike Winesett at 428-3700.

'Cabaret' Good But Not Great

The Lake Wright Dinner Theatre has temporarily abandoned its usual theatre-in-the-round style to produce the famous musical "Cabaret" on its huge main stage, bringing to Tidewater theatre one of the most recent Broadway productions.

The Maureen Casey production of "Cabaret" pulls in some of the area's most talented performers, both onstage and backstage, and this talent is perhaps the show's saving grace. Their sheer determination to make it good does make it enjoyable.

The enormity of the stage is perhaps the biggest drawback...the singers, dancers, actors and microscopic sets are lost in the vastness and the set changes are severely hampered by the mere width of the stage. There reportedly were more sets until last minute decisions left them sitting at the wayside. The decision-makers might do well to reconsider this move...far better to fill up that empty space with something so that scurrying performers can get to the wings without holding up the next scene.

These are technical problems that will be worked out, however; the main point of interest is the show itself. It is enjoyable. It's not as great for as entertaining as one might expect, which may or may not be the fault of the local effort, but it is a worthwhile show to see. The first act is unusually long but the second goes much smoother and much faster. It is, in fact, a very long show... some three hours.

As Master of Ceremonies, Jack W. Cross Jr. is the dominating performer, moving in and out of the scenes, dancing, singing and cavorting every step of the way. It is a difficult role, not only in physical stamina but in presentation of the character, a heterosexual/homosexual who finds pleasure in any situation in which he finds himself. Cross's actions are at times overly grating, even though the role demands them, but as a whole he does a fine job, whether as a chorus "girl" or in a solo with a "gorilla".

The plot revolves around a group of people caught up in the German conversion to Naziism in pre-World War II Berlin. Mike Barlow is exceptionally good as Clifford Bradshaw, the young American novelist who shares quarters with British nightclub singer Sally Bowles.

Barbara Ellberg, the Tidewater darling of comedy, portrays Sally and does a sparkling rendition of "Don't Tell Mama!", a number uniquely suited to her own formidable style. The overall role, however, does not really fit; she is too sensitive to be truly convincing as the hard singer who prefers the wild life of the cabaret to a secure life with her lover in America.

The best performances, if not necessarily the best voices, are attributed to Pat Finkelstein as Fraulein Schneider, the middle-aged spinster who runs a rooming house, and Tom Story as her Jewish lover, Herr Schultz. They both turn in beautiful portrayals. Andingrid Holland almost walks off with the show in her comic role of Fraulein Kost, an aging German prostitute with a liking for young sailors. And, speaking of sailors, the quartet number is one of the best points in the show.

There are some disappointments. Gene Hammett's choreography is not quite up to par. Although the Kit Kat Club chorus girls are attractive and well costumed, all but one of the dances involves little more than scotching around on the stage in provocative positions. And the lighting is not as effective as it might be.

But "Cabaret" is a tough show to do and director Rolla Nuckles, the cast and crew have obviously put in many long hours and much, much effort in bringing it to life on the Lake Wright stage. It isn't overwhelmingly great. But they have done a good job and it will probably be one of the summer's entertainment highlights.

D. C. CURRENT BY CYRENE DEAR

"The basis of our government being the opinion of the people, the very first object should be to keep that right; and were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers, or newspapers without a government, I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter."

Thomas Jefferson-Letter to Col. Edward Carrington, January 16, 1781.

"The second day of July 1776 will be the most memorable epocha in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty, it ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of the continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore."

John Adams-Letter to Abigail Adams, July 3, 1776.

On July 2, 1776, the resolution for Independence, drafted by Richard Henry Lee of Virginia, was adopted by a committee including John Adams. On July 4th in Philadelphia the Declaration of Independence was agreed to, engrossed, signed by John Hancock, and sent to the legislatures of the States. A total of 56 members of the Continental Congress signed the Declaration representing the original 13 states.

Will Americans this year be celebrating Independence Day in the tradition prophesied by John Adams, or will it just be a glorified four-day weekend ending in about 500 deaths on the highways?

Independence Day and Christmas were two dates Congress did not trifle with when it created the Monday holidays to provide for long weekends. July 4th and December 25th remain sacred.

We are supposed to celebrate our Independence from Britain, but the British have a way of creeping back. The new President of the American Newspaper Women's Club sworn in by U.S.I.A. Director Frank Shakespeare is Pauline Innds, the British wife of Admiral Walter Innds.

Enjoying the inauguration of a fellow Britisher was John W. (Pat) Heffernan, National Press Club President in 1969. Pat is head of the Reuters news agency in Washington.

Following the Innds inauguration Pat and his wife, Edith, with a few friends joined British Night revellers at the National Press Club where they were entertained by The British Embassy Players. There was ample audience participation in singing such old favorites as "The Man on the Flying Trapeze," "Waltz Me Around Again," "Willie," "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," and "Show Me the Way to Go Home." The costumes suggested the Ascot scene from "My Fair Lady" in several numbers. The ladies of the chorus, although fewer in number, rivaled the Rockettes.

There will be one less cabinet post when Postmaster General Winton Blount turns over the Post Office Department to the United States Postal Service. The 8 cent stamp issue will be part of the celebration.

Apartments Deferred

City Council has again deferred for 90 days any action on Wesleyan Properties' application for a use permit to build 116 apartments on six acres at Virginia Wesleyan College. And, again, the deferral was based on already over-crowded schools.

Attorney Julian Rashkind, representing the builders, explained to council that the owners had been paying high taxes on the property for the past six years but could do nothing with it.

He said that when Wesleyan Properties bought the entire 56 acres for development in 1965 the tax was $234. They sought, and obtained, a rezoning from agriculture to multi-family and are now paying $5,076 per acre.

Councilman Robert Cromwell said it was a "familiar debate" but told Rashkind that "your responsibility is limited to this one piece of property while our responsibility is to the entire city."

He added that approval of such construction now might endanger any future school bond issue. "And we have to have a bond issue sooner or later," he said. "We'd be naive to think we wouldn't have to have one."

assistance to the dependents of employees who work at, but who do not live on, federal installations.

He said he was satisfied that state officials no longer "tamper" with impact funds as they have in the past.

A recent court decision in a suit brought by State Sen. Henry Howell now prohibits the state from deducting the amount of the impact funds from its per pupil appropriations, he said. "The law will no longer permit it."

If the impact funds can be retained, Whitehurst will support revenue-sharing. But he has even stronger reservations about Sen. Edward Kennedy's (D-Mass.) national health legislation and the President's welfare reform package.

"Kennedy's program would have the federal government take over health insurance and baggage," he said. "We would have socialized medicine." He estimated the cost of the Kennedy proposal at $70 billion per year and has introduced his own program—Medicaid.

"Everyone ought to pay something," he insisted. Under his own proposal, however, the government would pick up the tab for those too poor to pay all or part of their health insurance.

"The national health program we ought to adopt," he said, "should rely on the participation of the individual, employer contributions, and the private agencies we already have established (Blue Cross, Group Health, etc.)."

"But we have to guard against anyone being wiped out by catastrophic illness," he added. Whitehurst publicly supported welfare reform last year, but now says he is "leaning toward" voting against the measure this year.

He said he was not convinced the government could provide sufficient work incentives to remove individuals from the relief rolls. The proposed $2400 minimum income for a family of four, he implied, would encourage the unemployed to remain on welfare and away from jobs. A good portion of Whitehurst's own job revolves around the activities of the House Armed Services Committee, of which he is a member. He is particularly distressed with the testimony the committee has received on the present and future status of the U.S. Navy and its economic impact on the Tidewater region.

In a recent speech before the Hampton Roads Navy Council, he said the failure to replace retired ships with new vessels threatened the nation's unchallenged access to the seas.

With the exception of the Holiday Volleyball Tournament

The Fourth of July Week-end will see a big volleyball tournament on the beach at 85th Street starting with mixed doubles on Saturday, one man and one woman on each team. Twenty-five teams are expected to enter in the 3-day event.

On Sunday a 4-man tournament will be held. Favored teams for this competition are made up of John Pentrack, Doc Blanchard, Ken Seigulinski and Walt Fleck, and the Chesapeake Choppers, led by Neil Johnson of the Virginia Squires, Dick Robbins, Fred Steiner and Joe Stallings.

The highlight of the week-end will be the NATO International Six-Man Tournament to be held Monday. The NATO countries will be represented by teams from Portugal, the Netherlands, United Kingdom, West Germany and Canada. Eight U.S. teams will also be entered.

Each tournament starts at 11 a. m. and will continue through the daylight hours.

Navy's carrier force, he said, the Russian fleet outstrips the American navy in every logistical and strategic category. Russia's surface-to-surface anti-ship missile (STYX), he continued, "is far superior to anything we have in operation now or on the drawing board for the future."

"I submit that every ship retired without replacement (due to budgetary restraints) brings us closer to the day when Russia will rule the waves," he predicted.

Each year the Defense Department delays construction of another nuclear attack carrier (CVAN 70), he noted, costs taxpayers an additional $125 million due to inflation.

Most of the new ships construction urged by Whitehurst would take place in the Norfolk Naval Shipyard.

The former professor's committee experience also has provided him with the first hand information on military operations in Southeast Asia. "I have supported the President on Vietnamization," he said, "and will continue to do so."

Consequently, he opposes the Nadel-Whalen amendment, the House equivalent of the Hatfield-McGovern amendment already defeated by the Senate. The measure would require total U. S. troop withdrawal from Vietnam by the end of the year.

"The amendment takes the initiative away from the president," thinks Whitehurst. "You bet your life I'll vote against it."

"The prisoners-of-war are extremely important," he said, and indicated the President had made their safe return a top priority.

"I'd stay in Vietnam 50 years in order to get those prisoners back," he said. "I'm sick and tired of having Hamd running up these trial balloons and then having us negotiate with ourselves."

Nonetheless, he was optimistic. "You can see the end of this thing (the war) by the end of next year," he said.

He would also like to see an end to the draft. However, he believes the Army needs time to make the necessary adjustments to a completely voluntary system. As a result, he voted last week to extend the draft by two years and to raise enlisted men's salaries by more than $1 billion.

"I hope we do reach our goal of a volunteer army in two years," he said in a recent newsletter, "and even if we do that, we will continue to register young men for possible military service in the event of a sudden national emergency."

The draft, of course, has often generated nationwide political dissent and violence. Whitehurst encourages peaceful, reasonable dissent, but condemns the "loudmouths and hotheads (who) pre-empt the headlines and television screen."

Speaking before graduates of Virginia Wesleyan College two weeks ago, he offered his own formula for a progressive, non-violent society.

"We have plenty of debaters," he said, "plenty of blamers, plenty of provocateurs, plenty of people who treat public affairs as an opportunity for personal catharsis or glorification. We don't have plenty of problem solvers."

Whitehurst was elected to solve his constituents' problems. Residents of the Beach will wait to see how he handles theirs.

Morris Jackson, representing the 396 families in the Bay Colony-Cavalier Park Community League, also pointed out that occasionally the dips fill with water from adjoining Lankford Bay.

"We could be isolated from the rest of humanity at an exceptionally high tide," he said.

He, too, stressed the safety factor, stating that "no other one-half mile of road in the city has such a record of accidents."

Ervin discussed the possibility of levelling the tops of the hills and filling in the wells. Council agreed that the situation should be studied by the Department of Community Services before a definite commitment could be made.

Ervin said later he understood the problem. "Only too well," he said. "I came over one of those hills one night and thought I was going to end up in a marsh. And I wasn't even going the speed limit," he said.

Hotel Demolition Decided

A spokesman in the office of City Building Inspector John Gibbs says a definite decision has been made to demolish the Martha Washington Hotel damaged several months ago by fire.

Charles W. Gardner, owner of the Beach Borough landmark on Atlantic Avenue, has been granted an extension until Sept. 15 to demolish the building. Today was the deadline on the initial order from Gibbs' office to either demolish the building or rebuild it to conform with existing standards.

An official of Gibbs' office Monday said the extension was based on two factors. The work involved in demolishing the building and clearing debris would present danger to the large number of individuals travelling through the portion of the Beach Borough, as well as resulting traffic problems, during the "holiday season" through Labor Day weekend; while the second factor involved the lack of settlement of outstanding damage claims filed with the insuring company as a result of the fires.

Fire investigators said their findings indicate the March 5 fire in the north wing of the building resulted from "accidental causes, however the two fires which damaged the hotel's south wing on March 27 have been classified as arson.

The investigation is continuing to determine the identity of the person, or persons, responsible for the March 27th fires.

McClanan Asks Sec. for Aged

Glenn McClanan, Candidate for the House of Delegates, has suggested that a Secretary of Senior Citizens' Affairs be appointed within the Department of Welfare and Institutions of the State of Virginia.

The functions of this person would be similar to those of the new position recently created in the states of Connecticut and Massachusetts. These two states have based their main purposes and objectives on those found in the preamble to the Federal Older Americans Act.

Those Federal objectives and the Act itself allow for State grants to local councils on aging, and funding of such programs as senior citizens service corps, nutrition education, community services, suitable housing and limited employment programs for older citizens such as the Foster Grandparents program being used in some areas.

McClanan continued, in remarks addressed to the Association for Retired Federal Employees at St. Francis Episcopal Church, "The Massachusetts Law directs the Head of Elder Affairs to take over such functions as the administration of old age assistance, disability assistance; licensing and inspection of nursing and rest homes, and related facilities; construction and administration of housing and transportation facilities for the elderly and other problems directly related to the retired and elderly."

"It is my thinking that Virginia could very well pattern this new area after this model and relate all the problems of the aging under one head in the Department of Welfare and Institutions. This will, in turn, be a major step in helping Virginia to help its older citizens to attain the objectives set forth in the preamble to the Federal Older Americans Act. Also, the proper state and local agencies can be directed and informed of funds and programs available through the Federal Government in developing means to aid our forgotten citizens—the older persons who in most instances have been active participating citizens in our economy and through circumstances not of their own making, need the help of all concerned."

Boating Safety Stressed

By proclamation the President of the United States has designated the week beginning July 4, 1971, as National Safe Boating Week.

During this period the boating public is asked to pay particular attention to the observance of safety rules and regulations and to make a mid-summer check of all boating safety equipment and devices. Have an approved life saving device in good condition on board for each person. Have proper lights, and a fire extinguisher and sounding device, all in good working order.

Use common sense and courtesy while you are on the water. Do not overload your boat; pay attention to weather conditions and rules of the road.

Week-end cruises will be a part of the program, as will a variety of other social activities.

Interested young men between the ages of 14 and 18 are urged to contact Dr. Bob Bosley at 464 - 4926 for further information.

Violation of What?

At least three young people in this city have been penalized, both in embarrassment and in funds, for appearing in Municipal Court without shoes. And there may be other cases. In most instances the young people were not in court to appear before the bench. They were among the spectators.

If the courts in this city have established a code of dress certainly it has not been known. There are no posted signs. There have been no public notices. There was, in fact, no way for those young people to know they were violating any rule until they were slapped with a warrant and fined. They were not even given the courtesy of a warning.

Such decisions, it appears, depend solely on the whims of the judge. He may not like pants suits. So the wearer is fined. He may not like a man's open collar or a knit shirt. Hence, more fines. And heaven help the poor unsuspecting female who wears hot pants outfit, regardless of how respectable it might be.

Some things are prohibited in court--smoking and cameras, for instance--but these are known and adhered to. But to expect citizens, especially young citizens, to just know what should or should not be worn is ridiculous. And to fine them for failing to abide by a set of rules that don't exist is a violation of their American rights. This is a very poor way to gain, or retain, respect for law and order and justice among the young people where respect is so badly needed.

This is a resort city. The restaurants, the offices, even the more exclusive shops are patronized and staffed by the casually dressed. And unshod feet are far from unusual. There may or may not have been barefoot youngsters in church. Chances are there have not been simply because people have been associated with the church most of their lives and have established their own preferred dress in a house of God. But it is doubtful that a barefoot person would be called before the altar and made to pay for such a "sin".

A court is a house of law, not a house of God. Truth and justice must prevail in each--and prejudices must be set aside--if they are to aid and guide humanity as they are intended. Injustice has no place. Anywhere.

Every Day Counts

It is a frightening thing when health officials tell City Council that raw sewage from an overloaded private sewage system is dumping into the city's ditches and eventually flowing into the Lynnhaven River.

And the only thing council can do is seek an injunction against an apartment complex owner to keep him from renting apartments in the area until the utility company makes improvements to the pumping station and sewer lines.

This may prevent any further stress on the overloaded lines, but it doesn't halt the flow that already exists. So the sewage keeps making its way into the river which produces some of the world's greatest oysters, a river with one branch already so polluted the oysters in some sections are unmarketable.

If the responsibility of forcing this company to make the necessary improvements rests solely with the State Water Control Board, then surely pressure can be applied somewhere to get quicker action from the State. The apartment builder obviously made the wrong decision respected health officials testify that raw sewage is dumping into a ditch in the Pocahontas Village area, that it is moving into the Lynnhaven River, that it is actually running into the streets from manholes, that manhole covers have even blown off because of sewage backup.

This is a deplorable situation, a situation this city should not be made to accept. Steps must be taken immediately to correct it. And to see that it doesn't happen again.

when he tied in with the private system rather than the Hampton Roads Sanitation District. And the city apparently made a wrong decision when it approved the apartments, even though the approval was based on improvements to the utility company's capacity.

These decisions have been made, however, and both the city and the builders are paying for their mistakes -- while the utility company continues to operate an overloaded system. The president of that firm may deny there is a problem but the public can hardly have faith in that denial when two

Interview Was Misleading

To the Editor:

When I read the article about the interview with John Jordan and me I was fully aware that there was no intention on your part to misquote me, but rather that the notes had grown cold and no longer carried the feelings and message as intended when we talked in John Jordan's office.

There is one fact to be corrected: W. Carey Reese, Jr. is Headmaster at Friends School and has been for four years. I am there as a counselor, working only in the morning.

In discussing policemen, I feel it a shame that children and young people no longer have the image of policemen as friends. This needs to be restored. I believe that through concerted effort to create dialogue between citizens, especially the young, and law enforcement officials we can understand one another and realize our goals are very much the same. I have suggested to those in office to set up workshops, bring in consultants, and to work in various ways to help policemen feel secure in their jobs. If they have let us down, we have let them down. We train in human relations by being human. Surely policemen will be the first to agree that they need more training and more pay.

From my own life and experiences I am aware that God can only work through us, the instruments created by Him. Even though we fail to express Him totally, we are trying in the best way we know. For this reason I could never feel critical of another or judgmental as to sincerity or motivation.

There is a lot of work to be done! As we strive to overcome darkness with Light and bring understanding and peace where disharmonies appear we will make a difference in our communities.

Let us make room in our hearts for one another's feelings, room in our minds for new ideas, and room in our lives for working together. Yes, I am a fighter, but the only weapon I have is a sense of caring. My only hope is to recognize that Divine spark in the other person or group and in myself and to realize we are all of one Father.

Thank you for your continued effort to bring understanding through the press. Cordially, Louise Wilson

To the Editor:

I want to express my appreciation to you for your admirable attempt at putting together in a short article what amounted to a conversation that lasted for over an hour. Unfortunately, because of this difficulty and the fact that the interview took place several months ago, several points should perhaps be emphasized that may have been lost in transcribing the conversation into the article which appeared in the Virginia Beach Sun on June 24th.

One derogatory criticism of our police department at this point is certainly not helpful and was not the tone of our conversation. Our concern is that every police department during these trying times is asked to perform a service that is almost impossible. We are pleading for higher wages and more extensive training in dealing with the myriad types of young people a police officer has to deal with today.

Two: unfortunately, the article inadvertently ended on a negative note which was not where we were. Our point two months ago and hopefully always is, is that other cities comparable to Virginia Beach have had similar problems and over a course of years evidently have been able to solve them. Knowing some of the fine leaders that we have in our community, we can also; Virginia Beach can be the finest city in the country.

This is where we are in our thinking. Sincerely,
John H. Jordan, Jr.

Editor's note: It was not the intent of the writer or this newspaper to misrepresent the feelings of Rev. Jordan or Mrs. Wilson. The time element involved was understood at the time of the interview but perhaps it was detrimental to the article. Our public apologies for having failed to express their views properly.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The sooner everybody in the country gets a REQUIRED education through 17 the sooner about 3/4 of our troubles will go away. Even then we are not going to feel the results of this until 17 years after it is put into effect. And the longer we sit on our hands the longer this same money will go for police protection, insurance, protection, welfare funds, unemployment funds and we will continue to have higher taxes elsewhere.

So take your choice, friends. Sincerely,
F. N. Howe

Opposes 2nd Issue

To the Editor:

Congratulations on two splendid editorials in your June 17th issue. The first entitled ARAY OF HOPE which covered a possible break in City Council pell-mell race to continue flood Virginia Beach with multiple family housing and the other, PREMATURITY ULTIMATUM, which dealt with the approval of the location of the Cape Henry School. However I noted from the news that Council did on this past Monday approve this school over the misguided objections of Mr. Fleming.

Now let us get back to the rat race again on the revived issue of another school bond issue that Council wants to bring to the voters. Did not Council learn from the overwhelming defeat of the last vote in January that the tax payers of this city will not stand for the wholesale building of schools to educate the children of non-tax paying parents? We long-paying property owners of Virginia Beach are wholeheartedly for proper education and are willing to pay our share but why cannot a method be worked out where those who do benefit from these schools pay their proportionate share? Could not a school tax be made on everyone with school age children who do not now support the city with real estate taxes?

So? Caution Council to go very slow and cautious before they decide to foist another school bond issue on the citizens which I predict will also go down in resounding defeat. Save the expense for a more suitable purpose. Such as an investigation in the inequities in the way property assessments are levied in the city. I am reminded of a quote I read the other day as follows: "The problem of taxation is simple. You can shear a sheep repeatedly, but you can skin it only once."

In discussing with other citizens the problems the school administration puts forth for their plea for more and more schools we frankly do not think that the situation is as bad as they think and tell the public. It is their way to propagandize their plea. However we will admit that overcrowding will result if the Planning Commission and Council continue their past performance in approving every large development project. Stanleigh H. Jones

KEEP OFF THE GRASS

By W. A. Leavell

The political promise is one of the most unusual things around.

It has been with us a long time but few people seem to understand it. The politicians understand it but the people don't.

For some reason, most people will believe a political promise knowing full well it is valueless.

You can hear some sound thinking people say they know a political promise is nothing but hot air and the same person will go on to tell you not to worry because the president or some elected official has promised to do or not do something. From the politicians point of view, the promise is just another tool to use in the constant race to be elected. Most of our "flock" use it like a carpenter uses a hammer.

They will range their promises wide. If they are talking to union members they will take the oath they will support unions until the devil comes for them. If THEY ARE talking to management they will take an oath that they will fight the growing power of the unions until the devil comes for them.

Such promises are about like saying hello and asking how someone feels. They have no meaning and only serve to make the people on hand at the time feel good.

They also help round up a few votes as long as the politician doesn't get caught with his promises down.

Most politicians know that no matter what they promise, when the time comes to make good, they will have ample room to wiggle out.

If nothing else they can always blame the situation on things over which they have no control. Take the recent point of the use of busting to force school integration in the South.

In the last election and at every opportunity since, the president has promised that he would protect the neighborhood schools.

NOW, THE BUNCH down at HEW are out in force helping force busing all over the place.

When asked about this, the promoters just smile and say they can't do anything about it. They blame the Supreme Court and its decisions.

It matters not that only token efforts were made to prevent busing. That promise has joined millions of others in the big graveyard of political promises made only to be broken. From 7 p.m. on the night of the election until the start of the next campaign political promises are just words spoken to get votes.

The time when a man was held to his word or his promises has long since gone. It is sad but true that political promises are like most of our politicians -- valueless.

The political platform has gone to the dogs as well. Every four years the major parties spend long hours, days and even months working up the official party platform. Then the candidates go out and run their campaign on that platform. PLATFORMS ARE the official list of promises. How many are ever kept?

If you can think of one please write it down and send it to me and I will mention it in a future column.

The last one I can remember that was kept was when President Eisenhower said he would go to Korea. I don't think he did what he wanted to do or said but I remember that he did make the trip.

If our elected leaders kept their promises we would not have a single problem around to bother us today. They have been promising us for years that they would solve all problems.

What have they done? Well, they have not solved any I can think of and they have managed to complicate those we have to a point where they are about to choke us.

With a national election coming up next year we are in for another round of political promises.

Both sides will be out in full force making all kinds of promises.

President Nixon will be still making his 1968 promises that he has not kept plus a new batch.

THE DEMOCRATIC candidate will be making some promises and claiming you can believe him. Who can you believe?

No to School Tax

It was a close vote, much closer than might be expected, but 67 per cent of the voters who responded said NO to the question "Do you favor a school tax on families with children enrolled in Virginia Beach public schools?"

The responses were fairly good, some very interesting points came out in the comments. One reader voiced what might be an undercurrent of concern over the possibility of enrollment from neighboring cities by stating, "No--If the family resides in Virginia Beach!" In other words, Virginia Beach residents pay taxes for schools already; if students are enrolled from other cities those parents should be taxed. A point well made.

Perhaps the most commendable comments came from retired persons who, despite their own personal immunity to such a tax, opposed it for fear it would affect the quality of public education. There are several letters to the editor along these lines. Some of the comments were:

"No--All of us are equally responsible; tax should be for all of us."

"No--This could probably lead to the destruction of our public school system. All citizens, whether parents or not, either benefit or are harmed by the kind of education that is provided by our public schools. We all have the responsibility to support them."

A reader who favored the tax had this to say: "YES--However, I question the legality of such a method with respect to State/Federal laws; private schools; administration by non-elected (responsible) School Board/officials. Certainly a desperate way to solve the problem of a 'developer oriented' City Council majority!"

School Superintendent E. E. Bricksall this week advised City Council that, since Council had cut the school budget, he is forced to economize to stay within the budget. He planned to turn the lights off on all the tennis courts as the first step but Council voted to foot the bill through the summer. He also expects in the future to cut down on use of the gymnasiums and lighted playgrounds for anything but school-sponsored events. The overall saving will be about $10,000. Well?

Honoree Praised

To the Editor:

It is with pleasure that I am writing to you with reference to Mrs. Joseph Barraco, of Star of the Sea Parish. Last Sunday I learned that she has been selected by the Knights of Columbus, Father Nicholas J. Habets Council No. 4632, as the outstanding Catholic layperson of the year for Virginia Beach. This award was made in recognition of her services to God, His church, and to her fellowmen.

Of my own knowledge I can state that Mrs. Barraco gives untruly of her efforts on behalf of others. She is particularly active in helping the young people, visiting the sick and needy, and rendering aid to the senior citizens of our community.

I am writing this letter with the hope that it will inspire others to follow the excellent example of Mrs. Barraco to be less selfish and to render aid to those in need of assistance. Frances Lannone

Assess Builders

To the Editor:

We keep reading about the Virginia Beach City Council's problem with the issuing of permits for more housing and the need for more schools. Why not let the people who want to magnify this crowded school problem, solve your problem? I refer to the companies or contractors building houses and apartments. We saw a similar problem solved this way in a northern area.

Let the School Board decide on the full particulars, as they have more knowledge than we do. For instance: If 40 students per room is ideal for teaching, then 280 students would mean a new grammar school. If you average two children per family dwelling, then 140 dwellings would create the need for a new grammar school.

When you have these details worked out, and know approximately what the cost of this new school and ground will be, assess each builder an approp-

To the Editor:

I don't believe your question is quite capable of a "yes" or "no" answer as far as I am concerned.

On the one hand I believe in compulsory education for all children through age 17, and I emphasize ALL children.

On the other hand I know there are families that can hardly afford the children's books much less the taxes and all other school expenses.

Some retired people (such as I am) with no school-age children say they shouldn't have to pay any school taxes. I don't believe in this. I think I should do my part toward educating the new generations. But there must be some limits somewhere.

There must be a limit for me because my income is fixed.

There must be a limit for some poor working families, even if they only have one or two children.

There certainly should be a limit for ALL of us if we are expected to help out on the huge families.

Most huge families are the ones that cannot stand an increase in tax according to the size of the family.

So we will have to say the AVERAGE family is, say, two children. EVERYBODY pays a tax that will guarantee a free education through 17 years for two times the number of families in Virginia Beach in which the mother is 50 or less.

Now comes the hocus pocus and sliding scale business for the experts.

According to income and according to the number of children in a family you pay so much more (this has to be on a three dimensional scale, I presume). At some point in space will go a line which, when intersected by any given family's line, will signify that this is their limit, beyond which the U.S., State or SOMEBODY else is going to pay.

Socialistic you say? Yes, it certainly borders on it (or a welfare state for some), but IT MUST BE DONE.

Kidney machine

Don't just carelessly toss away that top of a Betty Crocker food box. Save it and mail it to The Seabag, Building KBB, Naval Station, Norfolk 23511.

Navy personnel there are going full steam ahead with a campaign to raise 600,000 coupons by Nov. 1 toward the purchase of a kidney machine for a local hospital.

There are only two such machines in Norfolk, and the need for more is great. Women's clubs have joined the bandwagon, and all those tops of Betty Crocker food boxes will never see the waste basket as far as they're concerned.

Send the coupons to The Seabag, Building KBB, Naval Station, Norfolk, 23511 and help the Navy do its part to benefit the community.

MRS. MARY BARRACO

Mary Barraco chosen Outstanding Catholic Layperson of the Year

Mrs. Mary Barraco, of Quail Pt. Road, has many testimonials to her love of country, her humanitarian efforts on behalf of her fellow man, her civic contributions and her inspiring talks against Communism.

But she has none that she treasures more than the one she received Saturday when the Knights of Columbus Council 4632 named her Outstanding Catholic Layperson of the Year.

It was awarded to Mrs. Barraco at the Council's anniversary celebration at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

A member of St. Mary's Star of the Sea Church, she was selected from nominees submitted by all Catholic churches in the area.

A former Nazi prisoner of war during World War II, she has organized her own letter writing campaign on behalf of the Vietnam POW. She has delivered countless talks on patriotism to schools, churches and civic groups.

This prompted one 8th grade student at St. Pius to write to Mary: "...you spoke with feeling and expression, there wasn't anything false about you. And we could have gone on listening to you forever, because when you had to leave we were so involved in your life already, it was hard to come out."

Sincerity is the word most often used in describing Mrs. Barraco.

A native of Lawrence, Mass., she was seven years old when she moved to Belgium with her mother. She attended St. Mary's Convent, Ecole Verhaeren in Renaix, Belgium, and the Conservatory of Music where she studied voice and dramatics.

During World War II she was an active worker in the underground movement. As a result she was imprisoned in a concentration camp, where she was beaten and burned, but she never divulged her underground activities.

She was released from prison on Christmas Day, 1943. Rejoining the underground she fought the enemy until the war ended. For her activities she was decorated by the Belgian government.

In 1946, she returned to Lawrence. And in 1949 she and Joseph J. Barraco were married. They have one daughter, Rita Angeline, 12.

At the Beach Mary is co-ordinator of the Virginia Beach Civic Orchestra and Concert Singers. She spends much time singing for the elderly at convalescent homes. She is actively involved with the Senior Citizens Organization, which she helped form.

At Star of the Sea she is, among other things, past-president of the Womens Council, an officer of the Home and School Association, chairman of St. Cecilia Circle, a member of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, the Altar Society, a class mother, and religion instructor.

It was at the church, too, that she initiated her own Savings Bond Program, the only school in the nation with such a program.

Her award from the Council read in part: "In our efforts to ever promote and reward those Outstanding Catholic Lay Persons, who disregarding race, color, creed or national origin; with total dedication for service to God; His Church and our Fellowman; did, unstintingly, give of valuable time; personal services; have compassion for and administer to the sick; the poor; the afflicted; our elder citizens; the addicted and disillusioned youth of this Tidewater Community..."

And then Grand Knight Austin King gave Mary the award.

Party honors newlyweds

Mrs. Jennie R. Shelton, 3321 Shasta Court, was hostess at a "shower" and dinner party Saturday for Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Shelton, who were married in April.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Lynn Cayce, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Adriance, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Price, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Williamson, Dr. and Mrs. O. M. Wakefield, Capt. and Mrs. William B. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Wilson, Miss Margaret Gammon, Mrs. Albert Turner, Thomas Carter and James Felton, all of the Beach.

The bride, the former Miss Nancy Murray, is the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. William B. Murray. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Jennie R. Shelton of the Beach and Charles Vaughan Shelton, author and former publications editor at the Edgar Cayce Foundation.

The bride attended Mary Washington College and was graduated from Old Dominion University. The bridegroom is a graduate of North Carolina Wesleyan College.

Former Rockette attends Ball

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ferguson were in New York last weekend for the annual Charity Ball of the Rockette Association.

The association consists of over 300 former Rockettes now living in the U.S. and Canada. Each year they sponsor a ball to raise money for the Arthritis Foundation and the Alumnae Charitable Trust.

Janice Ferguson was a high-kicking Rockette herself, in 1944. For the past twelve years, she's operated her own dance studio at the Beach.

She said that the Charity Ball at the New York Hilton Hotel was special this year, for it marked the retirement of Russell Market who originated the precision line Rockettes in St. Louis and brought it to New York City when the Music Hall opened in 1932.

The chief attraction of the evening was a special routine featuring the famous Rockette kick. It was performed by the "Breathless Twelve", a rotating group of former Rockettes who had vowed that the years are not going to interfere with the agility and skill they acquired while working at the Radio City Music Hall.

Janice said the ex-performers looked great every inch of the way.

And it's perhaps appropriate that the Rockettes should choose The Arthritis Foundation for this year's charity. As dancers they are aware of the importance of smoothly functioning body joints. The money from the ball will go toward research aimed at eradicating arthritis.

Lotus Festival set June 18

Plans are now underway for the celebration of the annual Lotus Festival during the week of July 18-24. The week will begin with a church service at the Tabernacle United Methodist Church on Sandbridge Rd. at 11 a.m. on July 18 to commemorate the beautiful lotus growing nearby in Tabernacle Creek.

On July 22, lunch will be served at the church from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. At 8 p.m. that evening, a band concert will be presented by the 384th Army Band from Fort Eustis, at the site of the Norwegian Lady Shrine at 25th and Oceanfront.

The Lotus Festival is sponsored by the Cape Henry Woman's Club in cooperation with the Conservation and Economic Development Department of the Commonwealth of Virginia. Its object is the conservation of the last substantial growth of the American Lotus in the United States, and to bring the Lotus to the attention of horticulturists throughout the nation as well as our own community.

Visitors are cordially invited to view the Native American Lotus Water Gardens on Sandbridge Road. Picnic tables are available at the Gardens. Take route 615 south of Ocean, keep left at Nimmo Church to Sandbridge Road.

At Scott Memorial Church

SHARING THE SUPPER at Scott Memorial United Methodist Church Sunday were guests Mrs. Burns Spore, and Rickey and Helen Spore.

Panel discussion defines community services

Scott Memorial United Methodist Church held an informative panel discussion and covered dish supper Sunday in its social hall. Mrs. Robin H. Owen, chairman of the church's health and welfare committee coordinated the program. Panelists were Dr. Madge May, director of the City Health Department; Captain Burns Spore, business administrator, Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center; Mrs. Linda Ormsby, chief supervisor, Social Service Bureau, Virginia Beach.

Discussing the drug situation at the Beach, Dr. May noted that there is already a noticeable increase in drug cases, the majority of whom fall into the 18 to 24 year-old bracket. "There is most always some college experience in their background," she said.

Capt. Spore said that the Mental Hygiene Center currently has some 50 patients who were or are on drugs.

"But transportation is one of our main difficulties. There's no bus available for people wanting to come to the Center," he said, adding that this keeps many away who are in need of treatment.

Noting the high fee of private psychiatric care, Spore said that their facility is then, the only one open to the vast majority of people. "We do have a waiting list, but we want it to be known that we will take emergency cases at any time."

The ideal situation is for one mental center to serve 50,000 persons. "We support four times that number," Spore said.

Discussing that "Welfare Mess", Mrs. Ormsby said they now have 92 staff members. A unique position on the Beach bureau is that of community coordinator, filled now by Anna Brinkley.

"She coordinates all volunteer programs for the City such as transportation, food bank, clothing," Mrs. Ormsby said.

Stressing new innovations in Welfare, she said that last year the Federal Government claimed that welfare mothers were refusing to work because there was no place to leave their children, and it was out of the question to afford a baby sitter.

"But this can no longer be used as an excuse," Mrs. Ormsby said. "We now have licensed homes where the mother may leave the child."

She concluded: "Virginia Beach is a rich city - we shouldn't have welfare cases. But we're proud of one thing: the national figure is three per cent of the population on welfare; California has 10 per cent; Virginia Beach has less than one per cent."

REV. ALBERT J. SCHRADER talks with Capt. Burns Spore before the panel discussion.

PARADE OF FLAGS--The opening number of the pageant reflected its theme--"Fourth of July."

JUST LIKE THE REAL THING--In much the same fashion as their older counterparts in the Miss Virginia Beach contest, the mini-contestants modeled their finest for the judges and the audience--even if their line was a little crooked.

BOOTENANY TIME--Eight-year-old Sanja Mary Skansi, her dogears flopping to the beat, presented her own bootenany dance.

A CHARLIE BROWN LOVE AFFAIR--Julie Denise Owen, six, serenaded Charlie Brown with "Hey, Big Spender."

FUTURE MAJORETTE--Eight-year-old Kimberly Falge Bess showed baton form that may someday lead to a position in front of a band.

ONE IS HARD ENOUGH, BUT TWO...--Six-year-old Dawn Marie Walls decided to use two batons instead of the routine one in her talent act Friday. The result was a lot of applause and plenty of smiles.

SHOW EZ IS FUN--Pamela Kay Carney, eight, seemed to enjoy herself as she sang "My Favorite Thing" from "My Fair Lady."

TO KEEP THE RAINDROPS OFF, OF COURSE--Melody Ann Combs, nine, accounted her rendition of "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head" with an umbrella.

Committee Re-Organized

City Council has approved a reorganization plan for the Drug Focus Committee which will involve city officials, students and private citizens in the fight against drug abuse.

Six heads of municipal departments have been given the authority to designate representatives from each department to sit with the committee if the departmental head is unable to participate. These will be permanent appointments.

These authorities are Col. W. W. Davis, Police Department; Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans; Gordon Turner, Juvenile Probation Department; School Superintendent E. E. Brickell; Dr. Madge May, Health Department; and City Manager Roger Scott.

Named for one-year terms are six students: Sandra Bragg, Meta Beasley, George Francis, Nancy Pretzman, Scott Myers and Michael Dennis Jones.

The 12 private citizen appointees, representing a broad cross-section of the community, have been divided into three term groups.

Named for three years are Mrs. Nelson Boyette, Robert L. Gordon, Mrs. Mary Russo and the Reverend John Lyles.

The two-year terms will be held by the Reverend John Jordan, Dr. Ann Karnitschnig, James McKenry and Mrs. Doris Young. Mrs. Young is secretary of the committee.

Holding membership for one year will be Bernard Barrow, C.M. Baylor, Father Michael Creedon and Richard Hancock.

Filed

Authorities say they have charged James B. W. Poff, 24, with the alleged rape of a 13-year-old Virginia Beach girl. The rape reportedly occurred last Sunday night when the girl was allegedly taken by car to a remote section of a dead-end road in the Oceana region of the resort city and sexually assaulted.

Poff, attached to the Oceana Naval Air Station, was afforded a preliminary hearing on the charge in Juvenile Court Monday. He was placed under bond of $2,500 pending further legal proceedings scheduled for July 23.

Charge Forwarded

Edward Alan Givens has been bound over to a federal grand jury on the charge of unlawful possession of explosives.

Givens, 20, of Chandler Road, was afforded a hearing on the charge Monday before U. S. Magistrate Gilbert Swink, in Norfolk, and placed under a $1,500 personal recognizance bond pending further legal proceedings.

The charge, according to authorities, resulted from the alleged discovery by federal agents and Virginia Beach police of explosive materials in his home.

The materials reportedly included four jars of explosive powder, 25 military-type practice bombs, and materials which could be utilized in the manufacture of homemade bombs.

CIRCUIT COURT CLERK Richard R. Garriott (left) administers the oath of office to James C. Knight as he assumes Justice of the Peace duties.

New J. P. Appointed

James C. "Fuzzy" Knight assumed duties today as a Justice of the Peace for the City of Virginia Beach.

Knight will become a regular member of the Princess Anne J. P. staff serving the 1st Police Precinct area from an office in the building housing the City Jail.

He most recently served with the Virginia Beach Shore Patrol Detachment, headquartered at the 2nd Police Precinct, for two-and-a-half years, and has just retired from the U.S. Navy after 21 years of service.

Knight, 39, resides with his wife "Dusty" and their three children, Robert, Rhonda, and Kimberly, in the Malibu area of the city.

Chief J.P. Alvin C. "Sally" Rodgers said Knight will relieve him from a regular duty shift to permit him to devote sufficient time to supervision of the city's J.P. system.

Service

Launched

A unique service for military men and their families has been added to the Virginia Beach Hospitality House at 18th Street and Arctic Avenue which will afford direct communications between servicemen and their families between any two points in the world.

The service is being provided through a "ham radio shack" installed in the Hospitality House.

The system consists of receiving messages from servicemen stationed aboard military outposts, and/or ships at sea, relayed over existing "amateur radio frequencies" to a base station at the Hospitality House.

The base station has the capability of connecting phone lines to radio equipment, thus permitting servicemen to converse with their families at any point in the United States.

Present plans will permit servicemen to establish radio contact with the base station, relay the name and phone number of the person they wish to speak to, and be provided with three minutes of time at no expense to any of the parties involved. The "base station" will be manned for operations only at night, seven days a week, at the present time, however it is hoped this can be expanded in the future.

The program was established through joint efforts of military installations in the Virginia Beach region and the Armed Forces Committee of the Galilee Episcopal Church, directed by Rev. John Jordan.

Monday marked the official beginning of the operation when Capt. John E. Ford, C.O. Oceana NAS joined Rev. Jordan in witnessing the transmission and receipt of messages at the base station.

CPO, William R. Thomas, attached to Oceana NAS, spearheaded the installation of the radio equipment at the base station, and is presently servicing as maintenance officer for the operation.

Mishap Claims

Youth's Life

Young Steven Rinehart died last Thursday morning from medical complications after surviving being submerged for five minutes in waters of the Atlantic Ocean.

Rinehart, 16, of Oxon Hill, Md., was recovered from the ocean off 20th Street about 9 a.m. Sunday morning by life guards after submerging while swimming with friends. Although he appeared to be in a "lifeless" condition when he was recovered he was revived through the combined efforts of life guards and rescue squadmen.

He remained in the intensive medical care unit of Virginia Beach hospital from Sunday morning until his death four days later. Hospital officials indicated that while Rinehart regained the ability to breathe under his own power he never regained consciousness.

Doctors and medical officials said it was extremely unusual for an individual who had been under water the length of time Rinehart had to survive the experience.

Groups In Conflict Over Back Bay

By Howard Swindle

An organization of beach buggy owners and an ecology-oriented group appear to be on a collision course over vehicle traffic at Back Bay Wildlife Refuge, a federal game preserve at the southernmost limits of Virginia Beach.

The result of their efforts could possibly determine whether 40 miles of beach from southern Sandbridge to Nags Head Pier in North Carolina remains open to traffic.

Battle lines began forming in mid-May when members of the Committee for the Preservation of Back Bay authored a resolution which would ban all vehicular traffic at Back Bay until an impact study can be completed to show the effects of traffic on wildlife. The resolution, sent to Secretary of Interior Rogers Morton, claims vehicular traffic in not only resulting in the destruction of Back Bay, but also is driving away wildlife.

On May 21, members of the small group testified in Washington before a subcommittee hearing on interior and insular affairs. The group recently appeared on local television, presenting slides members said illustrated abuse at Back Bay.

Members of the Virginia Beach Buggy Association, who have borne the brunt of most of the committee's criticism, don't deny that Back Bay has been damaged, but they do deny they are responsible.

"You're not supposed to drive on the dunes," said Ira Fisk, the club's president. "And I don't see the harm in driving on the beach." A fellow buggy member, contractor George Johnson, said damage to the refuge results from people whose vehicles aren't equipped for off-the-road driving. "I'd say that 50 per cent of our members have four-wheel drive vehicles and others have spent considerable money in good equipment," Johnson said.

Another member of the dune buggy association, interviewed Saturday at the ramp leading to Back Bay, agreed that conventional cars are the culprits. "That's exactly what I mean," he said, pointing at a new car sunk to its fender wells in sand. The car had gotten only a few feet off the paved road before it bogged down in the heavy, loose sand. Its passengers were jacking up the rear end and putting boards beneath it. "Even if they get it out of that rut, they'll never make it to the beach," he said. "That's what tears up Back Bay."

Several members of the buggy club were at Back Bay during the weekend handing out litter bags and brochures with the association's slogan—"Be a Beach User, Not a Beach Abuser."

But Robert G. McCausland, an ODU biology major who heads the ecology group, claims vehicle traffic does more than merely tear up the beach. "It's not just the dunes we're worried about," he said. "The beach, in 1933, was originally intended for a refuge for nesting birds, but on a recent tour our group saw only one...there should be nesting birds, turtles and ghost crabs and there just aren't."

McCausland and his group, a part of Environment Conservation Organization of Students, favor closing the refuge to all cars and permitting pedestrian traffic only in certain times of the year. "It (the refuge) should be fenced off and those who wish to walk through it could phone for a permit," Causland said. "Admittance should be totally banned, sometimes—mainly during the nesting season."

The ecology group also claims the open-door policy at Back Bay causes other problems. A newsletter sent to the group's members and news media stated, "Over 70 per cent of the beach users are observed with beer cans which are left strewn all over the beach, and hyperdermic needles can be found without much trouble. Lovemaking is becoming commonplace on the beach itself."

Fisk, head of the 110-member buggy association, says closing Back Bay to the public would deprive people of "a great recreational area." "I can't think of any better way to spend a Saturday or Sunday than taking the kids to Back Bay," Fisk said. "It's good clean fun and it's getting them off the streets."

As a native of Princess Anne County, Fisk said he considers Sandbridge and Back Bay a part of his heritage. "And I resent a bunch of Johnny-come-latties who try to deprive me of it," he said.

Fisk said the name of the organization may be causing part of the problem. "If you say

Local Draft Calls Halted

Pursuant to orders from State Selective Service Director Ernest Fears, the drafting of young men in Virginia Beach is being discontinued until further notice.

The move followed the failure of Congress to renew the draft law which expired at midnight last Wednesday night.

Mrs. Page B. Hartley, Director, Local Selective Service Board #100, said the order directs that "registrants shall not be ordered or delivered for pre-induction examination or induction. Postpone, until further notice, any scheduled delivery for induction, examination or associated processing."

The order also postponed any classification of potential inductees until further notice. Mrs. Hartley pointed out the only exception to the discontinuance of processing inductees concerned the drafting of doctors and/or dentists, who were already being processed under Selective Service "special call #1". This, however, according to Mrs. Hartley, does not affect any doctors and/or dentists in Virginia Beach.

CCO Opposes Redistricting

The Council of Civic Organizations, composed of members of some 70 civic leagues throughout the city, has become the first group to oppose the Federal ruling on the State's proposed reapportionment plan.

In a letter to City Council, with copies to Senator Edward T. Cason III and Delegates B. R. Middleton and Richard Guy, CCO President Arthur G. Riddell Jr. had this to say:

"The Council of Civic Organizations of Virginia Beach seriously deprecates the reapportionment decree by the four judge Federal Court panel. The decision, to lump many thousands of Virginia Beach residents into the 39th District of Norfolk, deprives these citizens of effective representation for the next 10 years. The disproportion (29,000 Virginia Beach residents to 15,000 Norfolk residents) will grow even greater with the years—for Norfolk's population did not increase in proportion to the rest of the state during the 1960's. The logic would appear to DEMAND that Virginia Beach's representation should be INCREASED to four seats, to correct this disparity and to accommodate the known growth that will take place in Virginia Beach during the 1970's."

"This unwarranted judicial intervention in the legislative process has failed to take full cognizance of this city's continuing growth in determining the degree of representation for Virginia Beach. This dilution of our voting rights, that will grow ever more serious during the 1970's, is being imposed by the Federal Court on the State of Virginia where no discrimination or civil rights questions are fundamentally involved.

"In virtually every area including taxation, the community interests of the 29,000 Virginia Beach residents are simply not compatible with those of the 39th District. It deprives these citizens of the direct or unbiased representation to which they are entitled as individual citizens."

"Accordingly, we strongly urge the City Council of the City of Virginia Beach to petition the four judge panel of the Federal Court for a rehearing as to the Virginia Beach aspect of the decision, or to appeal this decision to the UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT."

Group Seeks Concert Site

A pop concert designed to attract youths for drug referrals, ecological studies, job opportunities and "just an opportunity to rap" is tentatively scheduled for Wednesday—that is, if a group called Friends of Virginia Beach Youth can find a place to stage the event.

Members of the group, formed originally to counter what it calls "anti-hippy ordinances," met Wednesday at the Chamber of Commerce to lay groundwork for the concert. The group already has plans for several self-help booths, but it is having trouble finding a place to hold the concert.

According to Mrs. Ann Ramsey, an advisor and one of the Friends' founders, the group is hoping to stage the concert at the city's Redwing Park. However, earlier this week, the

Woody Tells Of Jones' Murder

By Les Lehigh

During his Circuit Court trial on charges that he murdered Samuel W. Jones, Sr. last Labor Day weekend, Robert Lee Woody has based his defense on efforts to place the full blame for the crime on Rayette Tillman Jr.

Woody 33, and Tillman, 38, both of Norfolk, were charged with the crime after the bodies of Jones, 62, and his 49-year-old wife, Jane, were found September 8 floating a short distance off shore near the Little Creek jetty. No charges have been filed in the death of Mrs. Jones.

The wreckage of their 30-foot three-hulled trimaran was discovered on the rocks of the third island of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel on September 5. The Jones' had been reported missing since the evening before when, according to witnesses, they took two prospective buyers for their sailing vessel for a tour of the storm-tossed waters of Chesapeake Bay.

In pleading Woody's case chief defense attorney Stanley E. Sachs joined Woody in not denying that the defendant was on the trimaran at the time of the crime but that he had nothing to do with Jones' murder.

When found the two bodies were bound together with short lengths of cord and chained to a small boat anchor. An autopsy revealed both had died of strangulation and had been in the water for approximately four days.

Woody and Tillman were identified as the prospective buyers of the trimaran. They were seen on board the vessel with the Jones' as it left a dock at the couples Lynnhaven Drive home on the evening of September 4.

Bridge-tunnel patrolman Lawrence H. Stevens, Jr. testified that Woody and Tillman climbed onto the bridge-tunnel from the third island about 2 a.m. September 5.

Both men were wearing life preservers, according to left the Ocean View area earlier in a small sailing boat which rammed onto the island rocks during a sudden storm.

The only wreckage found near the bridge-tunnel's third island was identified as that of the Jones' trimaran.

Woody's defense was based on the grounds that he had nothing to do with the murder of Jones and that Tillman alone was responsible.

This plea was contained in a 44-page statement, which had been given to Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans and Police Detective Allen Sincilar by Woody shortly after his arrest. This statement was introduced into court records along with Woody's own testimony.

Woody said that he and Tillman went to the Jones' home on September 3 on behalf of a man he identified as "a Cuban freedom fighter" known only as "Diaz," this individual has never materialized.

Woody testified Diaz was prepared to offer $6,300 for the trimaran "Skat", but that he had reached a sale price of $5,200. Before the sale could be consummated, according to Woody, Diaz informed him he had located another boat and had no interest in the "Skat".

Woody testified he and Tillman returned to the Jones' home on September 4 and informed Jones "the sale was off". Jones then invited Woody and Tillman to take a trip on the trimaran, the statement said.

When the boat reached Chesapeake Bay, according to his testimony, Woody was at the controls heading for one water

Hicks Is Honored

Robert K. Hicks, 3805 Concord Bridge Rd., Virginia Beach, has won a place on the honor roll of the Combined Insurance Company of America for writing 100 or more introductory accident policies during a special sales campaign week benefiting the Boys' Clubs of America in his region and across the nation.

He also will receive a personally inscribed Certificate of Appreciation from the Boys' Clubs.

Robert Boyajian, Jr., resident vice president and general manager of the company's southeast division, said that through his accomplishment, he helped the division - which covers the states of Alabama, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia - achieve a sales volume of 39,843 "Little Giant" accident income protection policies.

Navy Ensign William K. Harris, husband of the former Miss Mary A. Hughes of 5712 Lenox Drive, Virginia Beach, Va., recently visited the port of Augusta Bay, Sicily aboard the gasoline tanker USS Nespeles.

The Nespeles is currently supporting amphibious forces in the Mediterranean.

One-Act Plays Set

Two outstanding one-act plays will be presented at the Norfolk Theatre Center on W. Freemason Street the next two week-ends.

The plays are Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Aria de Capo" which will not be open to anyone under 18 because of a nude scene, and Lanford Wilson's "Home Free" which will star Margaret Lunford and Mike Hunter.

Starring in "Aria" will be Hunter, Sandy Brandon, David Dexter, Mark Versipille, John Nest and others.

Producer of both plays is David Nichols and Bob Capri, formerly with the Virginia Museum, is director.

They will be presented tonight through Sunday and July 15 through July 18. Curtain Thursday through Saturday will be 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

Another thing about this production that makes it so unique is the lack of a dominating character or performer. Teyve and his family supposedly have the lead roles but each and every one of the 28 singing and/or speaking parts is equally important to the plot and to the success of the show. There is not a weak spot in it, even in the singing roles, which

Don't Miss 'Fiddler' Whatever You Do!

The Cavalier Dinner Playhouse's presentation of "Fiddler on the Roof" is so good it's a nightmare. A reviewer write convincing copy about a show when there's nothing to criticize? And who is going to believe the review when all it says is "beautiful," "great," "magnificent," "perfect," etc?

But that's the way it is with "Fiddler" so why try to be professionally sophisticated and find fault when there is no fault? Never have I seen a show on a local stage as beautifully done as this one. It truly is flawless, from the simplicity of the sets to the excellent choreography and musical direction to the unbelievably talented cast.

Of course the Cavalier troopers had a beautiful vehicle with which to work. "Fiddler" is a simple story about a simple people, woven together with such glorious music as "Tradition," "If I Were a Rich Man," "To Life," "Do You Love Me" and many others.

The plot revolves around Teyve, the dairyman, his wife, Golde, and his four lovely daughters, Tzeitel, Hodel, Chava, Shprintze, but the townspeople of the small Russian village Anatevka are equally important to the show. The time is 1905 and Russia is on the brink of a revolution but Teyve and his friends are oblivious to the troubled times. They live only within the boundaries of their Jewish traditions; they are ignorant of the pressures in the world outside their small village. When the troopers descend upon them they must finally face life and tragedy.

Teyve is a man long to be remembered. He is harsh at times, as he struggled to maintain the cherished position of head of his household of women. Yet he is warm and tender and sensitive as he sees his beloved daughters marry.

men he did not choose for them - a flagrant violation of tradition. Into this roll steps Josh Barry, breathing into the character the homespun quality that makes Teyve so sincerely gentle, so lovingly awkward. It is a memorable portrayal, one so memorable it may haunt Barry for many years; those who see "Fiddler" will probably always see a bit of Teyve in Josh Barry.

One of the most touching, and beautifully executed and directed, scenes ever staged locally is the observance of the sabbath, when Teyve and his family gather around the table while the villagers, carrying lighted candles, spread throughout the audience and sing the "Sabbath Prayer." It simply cannot be described.

is a miracle in itself. The talent is new and fresh and top quality. Sylvia Neff, as the wife, Golde, does a fine job, especially on "Sunrise, Sunset" and the daughters-Dottie Holtz, Amy Boyce, Dawn Wagner and Nanette Gordon-are lovely in appearance as well as voice. Director Jon Dawson was, indeed, fortunate to find four such appealingly talented young women for these roles. He was in fact fortunate to cast this show at all, since so much depends on even the smaller roles, and to come up with the cast he did is a real feather in his, and the Cavalier's cap.

To cite each and every member would be too lengthy, so all that can be done here is to offer printed bouquets to Anne Kiss, as Yente, the Matchmaker; Norman Bossert, Motel, the tailor; Martin Thompson, Perchik, the student; Roby Brown, Mordcha, the innkeeper; Ed Kovner, Lazar Wolf, the butcher and understudy to Barry; John Whitley, Rabbi; Jack Bloom, Mendel, the Rabbi's son; Kenny Morris, Avram, the bookseller; Steve Feuerstein, Nachum, the beggar; Martha Blankenship, Grandma Tzeitel; Theresa Worsall, Fruma-Sarah; Craig Jackson, constable; Jim Fairchild, Fyedka; Jimmie Lunell, Shandel; and villagers: Cathy Pleva, Sheila Walters, Kenny Little, Jim Glebel, Bill Griggs, Cheryl Fairchild and Nina Hindlin.

To all of these, to The Fiddler, Peter Dixon, to choreographer Joan Henderson, to music director Dick Barnes, to Betty Trout, who did costumes, to Shozzy Margolius and to Mark Thomas, to all of you, a special "thank you" for bringing to Tidewater one of the greatest shows we will ever have a chance to see.

Summer Jobs May Affect SS

Earnings from summer jobs may affect monthly payments for student social security beneficiaries, according to Mr. Teets, Social Security manager in Norfolk.

Over 4 million young people collect monthly social security benefits as children of retired, disabled, or deceased workers. Many of these young beneficiaries will spend the summer school vacation working, Teet said.

"The amount students earn can have an important effect on their benefits," Teets said. "If total earnings for the year-including parttime and summer work-are more than $1,680, social security benefits are reduced. But student beneficiaries can receive full benefits for any month in which they do not earn more than $140."

Student beneficiaries whose yearly earnings top $1,680 will have $1 of benefits withheld for every $2 they earn from $1,680 up to $2,880. Above yearly earnings of $2,880 $1 in benefits is withheld for every $1 earned.

The majority of student beneficiaries probably will not earn over $1,680 working only during the summer vacation, Teets said. "But a beneficiary's earnings could easily exceed $1,680 if he also works part time throughout the school year."

If any student has a question about his earnings, he can call or visit his nearest social security office, Teets stated. "If a student beneficiary definitely knows his earnings for this year will go over $1,680,

Pari-Mutuel Hearing Set

The Commission on Pari-Mutuel Betting will hold a public meeting Tuesday at 10 a.m. in Room 905 of the Ninth Street State Office Building in Richmond.

Featured speakers will be James E. Bassett III, Lexington, Ky.; general manager of the Keeneland Association race track and horse sales; Spenser J. The Olympiads swing, turn, twist and somersault high in the air on special circus equipment specially designed for their act. This unbelievably exciting act will be touring the United States on a limited engagement. They will give two performances, at 7 and 10 p.m., during their stay at Seaside Park.

Be sure to visit Seaside Amusement Park during the July 4th week-end. There's always something fun going on. Admission to the park is free.

Tournament set July 30

Insurance Causing Economic Hardship Morrow Tells SSC

James R. Morrow, Virginia Beach House of Delegate candidate in the September 14 Democratic primary, made the following remarks Wednesday to a special State Corporation Commission hearing on a series of proposed increases in automobile insurance rates in Virginia:

"Today, you gentlemen are faced with decisions in regards to the insurance industry of the Commonwealth and her driving public that will have a long-range impact on the welfare of our state.

"Before you, a proposal lies from the Insurance Rating Board of New York asking you for an average 11.3 percent increase in bodily injury and property damage liability insurance rates, affecting about 40 percent of the driving public in our state.

"These proposed increases range from a small 5.2 percent for bodily injury liability for policies with limits of $15,000 per person and $30,000 per accident, to an increase of 22 percent for property damage liability with a limit of $5,000 per accident.

"Though, on the surface, such increases seem mild in this era of high inflation, I feel, as many other Virginians do, that these proposed increases, coupled with those in previous years and those surely to come in the future point to deep rooted problems in our automobile insurance program in the Commonwealth.

"Let's reflect for a moment. Over the last 10 years, automobile bodily injury and property damage rates in Virginia have risen by 33.9 percent, with no prospect in sight for a slowing down of this continued inflationary spiral.

"It is apparent that unless reform is forthcoming from the insurance industry, state government, the legal community and other concerned parties, that we could be entering into an era of forcing more and more people into economic hardships when it comes to providing themselves with a basic need in our highly mobile society, that would rank with food and shelter and gentlemen I am referring to the simple but increasingly complicated act of providing motorized transportation in this automobile era.

"Other communities, gov-

ernmental agencies and business and political leaders throughout the country have come to this realization, and I say to you today that Virginians must do the same.

"In Massachusetts, for example, where I not long ago had an opportunity to meet with the author of that state's unique no-fault insurance program, John Ryan, Special Attorney General to the Governor of Massachusetts told me during a visit to Boston on May 6 that the pressure of rising auto insurance rates over a period of years finally forced the realization that the only way rates could be controlled was through a modification of the insurance system. Mr. Ryan described the rating problem as 'critical', immediately prior to the adoption of the so called Massachusetts No-Fault Plan. Prior to adoption of the plan many large insurance companies were seriously considering removing themselves from the Massachusetts auto insurance market.

"The Massachusetts Plan is based on payment of accident medical claims without regard to who causes the accident, thereby eliminating a large share of the adjusting expense. In Massachusetts, for instance, loss of income payments of up to $2,000 are guaranteed and an injured party cannot sue for 'pain and suffering' unless his medical expenses exceed $500 with certain exceptions.

"That program has been underway since January 1. Already there has been a 60 percent decrease in the number of claims for the first quarter of this year.

"Savings are on the horizon for the driving public in Massachusetts slowing the climb of insurance rates.

"A great feature of such plans now under way also in Delaware and Puerto Rico, is that they save money because much of the legal action which now follows comparatively minor accidents is eliminated. Legal and adjusting fees, according to a recent Congressional report, consume more than 25 cents of every insurance dollar.

"None of us here want to see the same pressures build as those which occurred in Massachusetts and if we continue to give rate increases without any consideration for changes in the system we will undoubtedly face a similar problem.

"I now have a citizens committee at work to come up with a plan of reform for Virginia's insurance industry that might be considered by the 1972 General Assembly. It will file a report publicly on September 1.

"Meanwhile, I propose to you today that the State Corporation Commission, in considering this current increase for rate hikes, defer any such action for a year. As long as we continue rate increases regarding an inefficient system the industry will not press for changes.

"During this year's period, the SCC, as a body representing all faces of Virginia, would pursue a course of action in the General Assembly and the Executive Branch of state government to bring about a change in our insurance programs in the Commonwealth in the 1972 legislative session.

"Earlier in these remarks I alluded to a congressional report on how our insurance dollars are spent. That report notes that claimants receive only 42 cents of every insurance dollar invested, 26 cents towards company expenses, legal fees receive 16 cents, adjusters receive 14 cents and court costs take 2 cents.

"That's a poor investment. A poor investment by anyone's standard and I don't think anyone here will argue that point and not agree that it is time for a change in handling of this problem."

Miss Virginia Beach, Sandra Rice, received a commemorative stamp and envelope during the inauguration of the new United States Postal Service last Thursday. Postmaster Joseph Crosswhite (ctr.) witnessed the "first issue cancellation" by Postal Clerk A. W. Cross during ceremonies at the Virginia Beach Post Office headquarters on Atlantic Avenue. Open house services were held at several of the postal service branch offices throughout the resort city during the inauguration ceremonies.

6-mo. residential Permits surpass Any full year

Permits were issued during the first six months of 1971 for more new residential dwelling units in Virginia Beach than had been granted in any previous full year of the city's history. Building Codes Superintendent John E. Gibbs reports.

In all of 1964, Gibbs said, Virginia Beach added 3,412 housing units and already this year the total is 3,463 units (1,220 single-family homes and 2,243 apartments).

Gibbs also notes while making his regular monthly report that the value of all permits for January-June 1971 was less than $5 million from establishing a new record for a full year. The total value record of $7,855,114 was set in 1969, and the running total for 1971 was $67,881,386 at the close of business June 30. For comparative purposes, at the end of June in the 1969 record year the values had reached $58,008,545.

"It now appears likely that Virginia Beach will have more than $100 million worth of new construction in 1971," Gibbs commented, "and it just might be that the record we will have this year will stand from now on."

In June, all types of permits issued were worth a total of $12,430,131. Included in those totals were 233 single-family homes and 443 apartments, valued at $11,008,406.

And, while the buggy association has its share of young members, Flak is quick to point out its other members. There's a bank president, several contractors and other businessmen and, according to Flak, even Virginia Beach city councilman Murry Malbon.

But now the question is: can building and fences at Back Bay also mend the fences that already exist between the two groups?

vehicular traffic is the only thing that can bring back the wildlife. Litter baskets and litter bags make it more pleasant for the people, but not for the wildlife," McCausland said.

At the same time, the dune buggy association has adopted a "plant a post" proposal which it hopes to present to area bird watching clubs. Under the plan, each member of the buggy association and the bird watching club would buy a post and, together, they would erect and fences at Back Bay.

But now the question is: can building and fences at Back Bay also mend the fences that already exist between the two groups?

Top Tourist Business So Far in 1971

Tax receipts from restaurant meals and transient lodgings for the first six months of 1971 indicate Virginia Beach is headed for another banner year of tourist business.

Special Tax Administrator Louis G. Darden reports that taxes collected by June 30 reflect a 24.5 percent increase for city-wide restaurant business and 17.6 percent jump for lodgings. The total business volumes on which taxes have been paid were, for restaurants, $8,891,782 in 1971 and $7,143,713 in 1970; for lodging places, $2,627,435 in 1971 and $2,234,591 in 1971.

And what would a July 4th parade, depicting the beginning of our country be without the likes of Mike Fantone, small drummer boy, Don Eastman and Gene Eyma? The Spirit of '76 came through loud and clear in the parade at Sandalwood Road, the eighth such that the neighborhood has sponsored.

No Representation

A panel of four Federal judges last week decreed that over twenty-nine thousand Virginia Beach residents should be without representation in the State House of Delegates and some forty thousand would suffer the same fate in the State Senate. Four men took these thousands of people and placed them with the Norfolk population to supposedly eliminate discrimination in the State's proposed reapportionment plan.

This is the most vile discrimination to date. It is, in fact, annexation of an entire borough of this city into the political mire of Norfolk, the syphoning off of thousands of Virginia Beach people who will have no opportunity to vote for representatives primarily interested in Virginia Beach. People in Bayside Borough now have little voice in General Assembly actions affecting their own city.

This is a city of over one hundred and seventy-two thousand people. Each and every one is a Virginia Beach citizen, regardless of race, creed or color. And no one, not even the four men who sit as "God" in that Federal court, has the right to tell these people they will be merged with the Norfolk mass.

For the next two years these Bayside residents will be faced with taxation without representation. Imagine what this city will be in ten years! It was just such a violation of rights that drove the colonists to dump British tea into Boston harbor. Is it any less of a violation today? Is it any more acceptable because the power that decrees it is our own American Government?

The people have stood by while Federal courts forced outlandish expenses on cities will deprive some of our citizens their right to elect representation; that they must abide by the interest of the Norfolk legislators, even though it may be of no benefit to them whatsoever, may, in fact, be detrimental.

If this city, if this State, allows this to happen without a struggle, then we, too, will have failed these thousands of people. City Council must appeal this decision. The General Assembly, when it reconvenes today, must call for a rehearing. This situation must not go unprotected.

Norfolk may be rejoicing over this new ruling. If so, that only shows the character of the city and its leaders. There can be no rejoicing by either party when there is discrimination. There can only be distaste. And decision is both unjust and distasteful.

The Council of Civic Organizations fully intends to let its feelings be known on this matter. And it is inconceivable that City Council will not do the same. Hopefully the General Assembly will also stand up for Virginia Beach. After all, it's about time this city received its share of fair play. Virginia Beach is not a poor relative to other Tidewater cities. It is a large, beautiful city of unlimited potential. It will have great impact on Virginia's future. It should be recognized for what it is.

In bussing children to schools on the far side of town in the name of integration. It is a miracle, and perhaps the shrewdness of the Virginia Beach school administration, that this city has been spared that. In a day when cities of any size are struggling under the atlas of services for their population, bussing has become just one more straw on the poor old back.

Now, the Federal Government says it

A Safe Holiday

This resort city has just ended three days of fun and frolic in observance of Independence Day... that long-awaited Fourth of July Weekend.

In a resort such as this, with its influx of visitors, crowded conditions and the deadly attraction of the Atlantic Ocean, a three-day week-end holiday usually ends in some form of tragedy.

But Virginia Beach rounded out the holiday with a clean slate, no deaths directly attributed to the holiday week-end.

It would be smug to say the city was lucky. It was not luck. It was careful planning and careful supervision on the part of many people. The Police Department was quick to close down the beach on Sunday when the surf became treacherous. The lifeguards in Beach Service maintained the surveillance, pacified the people and kept the beachfront on an even keel. The Coast Guard and Beach Police averted a near tragedy in the sinking of a houseboat at Rudee Inlet.

To all the people who contributed to the resort's safe week-end, Virginia Beach says "thanks". It was a job well done. And there are today many families throughout the country who continue to enjoy each other, free of tragedy, because a handful of people care.

Visitor Loses Faith

To the Editor:

I have always considered my husband and myself as very good citizens. Until recently we had great respect for the law, which is pretty rare in young people these days.

I am writing you this letter to let you know that it is your city of Virginia Beach, Virginia, that has caused me to lose my faith in our police force. I am also writing in hopes that this will be a warning to all the people of Atlanta, Georgia. By my letter I hope to show the people of Atlanta that Virginia Beach is nothing short of a tourist trap for innocent out-of-towners.

My husband was in your fair city working on an elevated water tank. He tried to get a motel room in your city the night of June 24, 1971. He only had $21.00 left out of the money he left Atlanta with because he had been on the road for several days. Normally he can find a motel that costs about $7.00 or $8.00 for a single, but not so in your city. The cheapest was $14.00. Since he knew that he would still have to do two more jobs after Virginia Beach, he decided to sleep in his truck by the beach. About 4 o'clock that morning he was awakened by two policemen. To say the least, they were not very friendly. They did not inform him of his rights, they just told him he was under arrest for sleeping in his truck and they took him to jail. When they got to the jail, they went through his wallet and saw that he only had $21.00. Since he could not stay in jail until Monday to see a Judge he asked to pay his fine. I am ashamed to say that, knowing how much money he had, they fined him $21.75. There he was, an out-of-stater, without much money and they show him no courtesy at all.

So that you will know what kind of a man my husband is I'll tell you a few things that might surprise you. After he got out of high school he joined, no I didn't say he was drafted, the Air Force and served his four years, one of which was overseas. He now has a 30% disability from his stay in the Air Force. He will be a senior in college (Georgia State) this September, which is something we both have sacrificed and worked hard for. My husband does not resemble a hippy type in the least, nor does he think like one. He is one of the few clean cut American men left in this country.

We have worked hard for our money, but that is not what is bothering me. It is the fact that the police of Virginia Beach are neither courteous nor fair and the fact that they took advantage of my husband. I hate to think of all the innocent people that this must have happened to. The crime rate at Virginia Beach must be very low if all your policemen have to do is go around picking up people, whose only crime was to be caught sleeping in a truck. (He was not aware that this was against the law, but I know that ignorance is no excuse.)

I hope that this letter will warn the people of Atlanta, and let the people of Virginia Beach, Virginia, know that I am sure if they were to visit Atlanta, Georgia, they would never be treated in such a manner. I would be ashamed to say that I lived in any city that treats people like the city of Virginia Beach, Virginia. Mrs. Robert Geier Decatur, Ga.

them causing serious injury to the cyclist. The accident was visible from my porch and while the cyclist may have been speeding, the speed was not excessive and would not have caused an accident had the cars been visible.

I sold my house and moved from the "dips" a short time ago. Probably, the largest single reason for the move was the fact that I could not allow my young daughter to play in the yard for fear she might be injured by a car out of control such as the one that struck a tree in the yard early one Sunday afternoon not too long ago.

I strongly urge the City of Virginia Beach to move to correct this situation as quickly as the machinery of City Government will permit. Very Truly Yours, John B. Dinsmore

'Dips' Forced Move

To the Editor:

Allow me to express my thanks for the coverage given to the problem of the "dips" on Bay Colony Drive and to the presentation of the problem to the City Council by Mr. McCoy and others of the problem. I have spoken with several people who were present at the meeting and they felt your article reported the discussion quite well.

Having lived across the street from Mr. McCoy for a little over two years and had my share of property damage and injured people on my lawn, I cannot emphasize strongly enough the seriousness of the situation. I cannot understand the City's reluctance to correct a road condition which probably causes more injuries and property damage than any other stretch of road of similar length in the city. Granted the project may be expensive, but how can dollars and cents be measured against the death or maiming of a young adult?

One additional danger of the "dips" which was not brought out in the article is the lack of visibility created by the hills. Shortly after I moved into my house, two cars found it necessary to stop at the bottom of one of the hills because spray from the mosquito control obscured their vision. Despite the fact that their lights were on and the customary precautions were taken, three motorcycles came over the hill and collided with

To the Editor:

It was with pleasure that I read in the July 1st issue of the Sun that Mrs. Mary Barraco had been selected as the Outstanding Catholic Layperson for Virginia Beach by the Knights of Columbus Council 4632.

The article referred to was nicely written and very impressive. I was the happy and thankful recipient of well wishes from Mrs. Barraco and some of the fortunate pupils under her most capable guidance when I was recently hospitalized. Their cheerful messages helped a great deal in brightening some otherwise dark days.

Those who made the decision in granting this most fitting award to Mrs. Barraco may surely consider their deliberations were well spent. Sincerely, George T. Mullen

KEEP OFF THE GRASS

By W. A. Leavell

Conflict of interest has always been a fact with our elected and appointed officials. It is assumed that when one of our leaders finds himself, or herself, in a position where the best interest of the people and a personal financial gain come face to face, the public interest takes a back seat. I don't know of any facts that can be quoted one way or the other on this situation but unless human nature has taken a turn for the better, I can't see personal financial gain taking a back seat to anything.

One of the prime areas of possible conflict of interest in elected leaders today is with lawyers who are elected to the Congress and to our state legislatures. It has long been considered proper for practicing lawyers to serve in elective offices. Being in the legislature or Congress does wonders for the lawyers business back home. In fact, many an attorney has served time in elective office to help build a profitable practice.

The conflict of interest question has become such an issue that some state Bar Associations and state supreme courts have adopted a new ABA (American Bar Association) code of professional responsibility which includes the following restriction: "A LAWYER WHO ASSUMES A JUDICIAL, LEGISLATIVE, OR PUBLIC EXECUTIVE OR ADMINISTRATIVE POST OR OFFICE SHALL NOT PERMIT HIS NAME TO REMAIN IN THE NAME OF A LAW FIRM OR TO BE USED IN PROFESSIONAL NOTICES OF THE FIRM DURING ANY SIGNIFICANT PERIOD IN WHICH HE IS NOT ACTIVELY AND REGULARLY PRACTICING LAW AS A MEMBER OF THE FIRM, AND DURING SUCH PERIODS OTHER MEMBERS OF THE FIRM SHALL NOT USE HIS NAME IN THE FIRM NAME OR PROFESSIONAL NOTICES OF THE FIRM."

The purpose of this new code is to induce members of Congress and state legislatures to stop using their elective office to help their law practice or firm.

A recent survey by Congressional Quarterly lists 301 lawyers as members of the current Congress. As you can see, this is a large percent of the total membership. Figures are not available on how many members of state legislatures are lawyers but it is no doubt even a higher percent than in the Congress.

The Bobby Baker case (Senate Majority Secretary Robert Baker) in recent years has brought this legal conflict of interest into the lime light.

The admission by former Senator Edward W. Long, D-Mo., that about $45,000 in "referral fees" was paid to his law firm by a St. Louis lawyer for the Teamsters helped bring this situation to the attention of the public.

During the Bobby Baker case it was disclosed that the law firm of Rep. Celler's D-N.Y., paid Baker a $2,500 "forwarding fee" for having referred a corporate client to it.

Since our law makers have a big hand in the making of our laws, and since they have clients who are concerned by these laws, it is quite possible that conflicts of interest could come up. The lawyer who is in elective office has been compared with the Judge who represents a client before the court.

While some members of Congress and the legislatures have eased out of their practice in recent years, many continue feeding out of both troughs.

A growing number of people have been expressing the opinion that we should get the lawyers out of the Congress and our state legislatures. They say it is the only way to solve the conflict of interest. They also point out that the legal baggies have not been able to solve the problem and that they never will.

Come to think about it, why should we have lawyers in Congress and our state legislatures? One of the big excuses our lawyers give us is that it takes a lawyer to write laws. Why? Most of the laws we now have take a lawyer to understand them. If our laws were written by non-lawyers we might be able to understand them better.

It has been suggested that when a lawyer writes a new law it is his personal annuity as he is the only person who can understand it enough to get around it.

For years now the lawyers have controlled our legislative process. Things have gone from bad to worse. Why not turn over a new leaf and let some other group have a try.

The only other group I can think about that should be excluded would be columnists. Most of us who write about government have been so mad at our "flock" that we might use the office to take revenge and outlaw as a profession.

Want Less Frills

The more questions asked concerning the schools, the more apparent one thing becomes—the people, certainly the readers of this newspaper, strongly favor better education in schools without the frills.

It was apparent again to last week's question: "Do the schools have a responsibility in providing the communities with recreational facilities, such as tennis courts, gymnasiums, light them, but the school even the classrooms and playgrounds used by the City Recreation Department?"

The response was not overwhelmingly a "No" but 86 percent of those who answered were inclined to feel that the schools do not have this responsibility. The response, we might mention, was lighter than usual since it was a holiday week-end.

One reader was quite adamant in his belief: "No—the schools do not have (this) responsibility. The schools have responsibility to educate, with subjects that will provide all individuals to make his decision what manner his future livelihood will be."

"This does not mean that they need recreational facilities to improve mind and body as part of the education. If, when they are not needed by the education system, the city could utilize the facilities for the community events with the responsibility put on the recreational or city officials."

Another said: "No, this should not be the school's responsibility. The tennis courts and other recreational facilities should be provided for the citizens, but it should come out of the city budget to build and light them, not the school budget."

The residents of Bayside Borough lost their vote for Virginia Beach representatives in the General Assembly this week when four Federal judges changed the State's proposed reapportionment plan. Bayside is now included in the Norfolk district. They lose their voice and Virginia Beach loses their vote. An editorial already appears today on the issue but the readers may disagree with the editorial stand. Regardless of how the people feel, they should make their beliefs known.

The golden lotus blooms again at Sand Bridge

By Helen Crist

It's Lotus time again. And once more, the lotus gardens at Sand Bridge will be alive with color, as rare golden American lotus blooms, eight to ten inches wide, ride high on blue-green leaves that often measure 24 inches in diameter.

That the gardens are still there, in all their beauty, is a tribute to the Cape Henry Woman's Club, which has made their survival a project to be pursued with fervor and determination for 17 years.

And for one woman particularly, Mrs. Cecil H. Reed, the project has been a personal act of faith and devotion to a cause that's been consuming and fascinating. So it was appropriate to visit with Luceria Reed on War Admiral Road, where she lives with her niece, Mrs. Stewart W. Cate.

White-haired and gracious and full of enthusiasm, she brought forth volume after volume of records of the Cape Henry Woman's Club, which sponsors the Lotus Festival each year.

"It was in 1954 that the club was looking for a project to make money. We were just a young club then. All of a sudden Edna Spruill came up with the idea to have a lotus festival," Mrs. Reed said.

They appointed Mrs. Reed general chairman. "I didn't know how to begin hadn't even seen the lotus gardens. So they told me they were then in full bloom to go take a look at them down at Sand Bridge."

So she did. "I stood there in amazement," she said. "I looked up and down the gardens and as far as I could see there was a golden path of blooms. It was fabulous."

She knew that in 1933 a hurricane had almost completely destroyed the plants, when they were flooded with salt water. But enough rootstock and seed survived so that it spread rapidly again. But how long would these gardens last unless they were protected and conserved?

She determined, then, to research the lotus in preparation for the festival.

"I exhausted the local library for information, then went to Richmond."

She wrote letters to botanists, to universities. But it was difficult to secure information on the American lotus because it had become so rare.

"All at once I began to receive letters in reply to all those I sent out. I found out that at one time the flower grew in profusion from Ontario to Florida and as far west as Nebraska. It was a staple food of the Indians who ate the starchy tubers and seed."

She recalls that the Detroit

The last substantial growth in America of the wild yellow lotus (nelumbo lutea) native only to this country, is in Tabernacle Creek at Sand Bridge. A specimen of this lotus Chamber of Commerce replied to her, stating that the rivers there were so polluted with chemical waste that no living thing could survive.

"This was a frightening thing to me. I couldn't sleep at night. If only people realized what is happening to our environment."

Would this happen to the Sand Bridge gardens?

Mrs. Reed went to the Virginia Department of Conservation and Development and secured its cooperation in co-sponsoring the Lotus Festival.

They contacted Radio Station WBOF at the Beach (it's now WVAB) and asked for assistance. The radio men came up with the "intriguing suggestion for all cars in the parade to tune their radios to WBOF, where they played band music loud and clear during the entire parade."

Ninety-seven newspapers throughout the country gave the story publicity. A big noisy parade kicked off the festival, with the Mayor leading it all.

Unfortunately, however, all the local bands had disbanded for the summer. "Mrs. Moe Davis insisted though that we had to have music, and music we had," Mrs. Reed said.

propagated with a 2000 year pink sacred lotus in Japan, formed a yellow-pink flower so beautiful it was exhibited at Expo '70 in Osaka. It has not as yet been named.

They contacted Radio Station WBOF at the Beach (it's now WVAB) and asked for assistance. The radio men came up with the "intriguing suggestion for all cars in the parade to tune their radios to WBOF, where they played band music loud and clear during the entire parade."

Then came the ball and the crowning of the queen.

Mrs. William P. Kellam was ball chairman that year. Ted Weems Orchestra played, and over 1500 people spilled over into the old Surf Club," Mrs. Reed said.

Twenty-three attendants and five queen contestants were escorted by Coast Guard and Air Corps officers. Judge Floyd E. Kellam presided over the affair. "It was the most beautiful affair you can imagine," Mrs. Reed said.

The queen was selected then, as she was through the years to follow, by "penny" votes. Contestants were sponsored by civic organizations, with 25 per cent of the money reverting back to the sponsors.

The first queen, that year of 1955, was Rita Piller, an instrumental music teacher in the public schools. "Her students really won it for her," Mrs. Reed said. "They robbed their piggy-banks, sold lemonade, did odd jobs to raise money."

Rita was beautiful in an elaborate gown and train designed and sewed by Mrs. Gladys Sias.

Joel Carlson, WTAR-TV did the commentary, assisted by Mrs. Wallace T. Clark, chairman Lotus Queen committee. Mrs. Robert J. Steinhilber was chairman of the musical program; Mrs. J.D. W. Cassada, chairman of the school contest awards, poetry and posters.

It was a big affair and successful, due, Mrs. Reed says, to the hard work on the part of everyone. However, over the years interest in the Festival Ball has dwindled and this is the first year there will be none, though the festival will be observed.

"Maybe it's the times," Mrs. Reed said. "But it's sad all the same."

But the interest in the gardens hasn't lagged. "The Cape Henry Woman's club has put over $10,000 there to preserve it," Mrs. Reed noted.

And what's the future of the gardens? Will they survive?

Mrs. Reed says, "This natural treasure of the rare American lotus can be destroyed practically overnight through flooding by high rides backing salt water in the Tabernacle Creek where they grow; by real estate developments and improper drainage; or by many other causes unless proper precautions are taken for its protection."

It takes constant surveillance to see that the fresh water is not contaminated with salt water. But Mrs. Reed feels certain that if the public is aware of the rare gift it possesses at Sand Bridge, it will respond quickly and successfully by taking steps to preserve the American lotus.

British Museum Houses Specimen Of Local Lotus

When John Clayton, 18th century American botanist, compiled a collection of Colonial Virginia flora and housed it in the British Museum in London, the American lotus was not included.

This was an oversight that Mrs. Cecil H. Reed, in her research on the lotus discovered through letters to the London Museum.

"Would they like to have a specimen to include in their collection?" Mrs. Reed inquired of them.

Indeed they would.

So Mrs. Reed diligently and carefully arranged a display utilizing borax, corn meal and other material.

This she put in her attic and forgot about it for a while.

One day her late husband was cleaning the attic. "You'd better remove that," he said "it's going to attract all sorts of bugs."

"I didn't think it would look like anything really," Mrs. Reed said. So she took it down from the attic.

But when she inspected it closely she was astounded to see that it was perfectly preserved; the flower, seeds, pod all in excellent condition. This was framed.

It now hangs in the British Museum, where Mrs. Louisa Venable Kyle, long a promoter of the lotus, a conservationist and writer, carried it aboard the Queen Mary and delivered it in person to British officials.

Queen Lotus I, Rita Piller takes a royal stance.

Queen Rita Piller's train makes a spectacular picture as the late Judge Floyd E. Kellam places the crown on her head. The train, made by Mrs. Gladys Sias is of white Duchess satin, embroidered with 300 yards of iridescent sequins, five pounds of bugle beads and pearls.

It's Important To Forget As Well As To Remember

BY REV. JOYCE KRAMER

We often emphasize the importance of remembering and are inclined to neglect the importance of forgetting.

Being able to forget quickly and completely is important to our happiness.

When you are the victim of some petty annoyance or irritation, ignore it. Forget it at once. Sooner or later you will anyway so why let it get your emotions stirred up over something so insignificant.

Refuse to react, argue or respond in a negative way to irritations. Be too busy occupying your mind with things that are much more important.

There is no need to be bothered by life's little irritations and annoyances. To do so is to open the door to emotional disturbances which frequently lead to physical disturbances. It just isn't worth it.

I REFUSE TO LET ANYONE OR ANYTHING INTERFERE WITH MY HAPPINESS. I AM GUIDED AND GOVERNED BY THE INFINITE POWER OF GOD IN ME.

Many children would accept two weeks of camp in the summer as a natural event.

But for some 70 mentally retarded and physically handicapped children between 5 and 18 years of age, it will be an experience to treasure.

They'll have the opportunity July 19-30 when they'll attend a day camp at Kingston Elementary School. And it's through the generosity of the Beach Jaycees, Virginia Beach-Princess Anne Junior Woman's Club, VA-Q #33 Officers, Wives Club, PA Navy Wives Club #141, Ki v Babcock, Inc., that the fee is made possible.

The idea originated with John Cregar, chairman of Helping Hands for the Handicapped, and his wife, Irene.

And it didn't take long to mushroom. "When Sister Marguerite at St. Nicholas heard about it," Irene Cregar said, "she told us she had exactly the person in mind to run it."

So she contacted Sister Mary Reilly, director of the Kennedy Institute, a day school for mentally retarded children in Washington, D.C. The Institute is a memorial to the late Lt. Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr.,

Sister Mary was asked if she would come to the Beach and share her expertise. She would and she did. And she brought with her Sister Suzanne Halle, her assistant in Washington, who will be director of the summer camp, with Sister Mary assisting.

They're house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Massey on Belmont Court, King's Grant. Saturday, we spoke with them at the Cregar's home on Harbor Point.

"We have 100 day students at the Kennedy Institute," they said, adding that their ages range from pre-school through high school, and those who receive vocational and job training as well.

"We place about 82 per cent of our students in jobs," Sister Suzanne said.

And they are looking forward to working with the local youngsters. One of the rewards for the children will be a daily swim in the pool adjacent to the Cregar's home. They will swim in shifts, supervised, of course by volunteers.

And speaking of volunteers, Mrs. Cregar asked that those who are interested in helping the youngsters for the two-week period, contact her or her husband at 428-3947. "We'd especially welcome the young people as volunteers although everyone is needed."

Great strides have been made in the treatment of the mentally retarded and handicapped. "One of the most important," Mrs. Cregar noted, "is simply that we have learned to expect more of them and they in turn respond to our expectations."

THE FEMININE PHYSIQUE

by BETTY WEIDER

The Feminine Physique Emotional Reasons for Getting Fat by Betty Weider.

Did you know that overweight is often an emotional problem? People eat too much from loneliness, depression, hurt feelings, resentment or from feeling unloved, unwanted. They eat to pamper or console themselves. Unfortunately, the "reward foods"—that is, the foods given to you as a child for dessert or for "being good"—are the most fattening foods: cake, ice cream, candy, and pastries.

Something goes wrong during the day and you think, "Well, I'll have a candy bar... I deserve it." Maybe you don't articulate it that way, but that's what's going on in your subconscious mind. You are "rewarding" yourself... you are saying, "Yes, I am a good person, even though Blank does not think so," and in taking the candy, you are pampering yourself as your mother once did.

Unfortunately, the "reward" you give yourself is self-defeating. It makes you fatter, that's all; it really doesn't help to solve your problems. In fact, sometimes it can make your problems worse because it adds the problem of obesity to all your other problems. I suggest you "reward" yourself in another way: a new hairdo, a new eye shadow, a pair of hot pants, or a movie. The reward needn't be one you put in your mouth!

Some people eat too much out of boredom. They have no interest in life except food. I know a woman who thinks of food from the moment she wakes up until her bedtime snack at night. She is one of those people who live to eat because they have not found anything else to live for.

I suggest to people like this woman that they take up a cause, a hobby, or a new career. There's an old saying that "He who wants to find himself must first lose himself," and I subscribe to that. Being busy at something that absorbs you takes your mind off food.

A project that is rewarding as well as absorbing is YOU. Why not make you the best possible YOU there can be? Get down to your ideal weight with diet and exercise (I'll tell you how I do it in future columns). Have your hair done once, by a top specialist in a big city and ask him to teach you how to do it yourself. Go to a make-up expert for a lesson in make-up—most large department stores have one these days, but if they don't you can always find one in a bigger city nearby. New York's "Make Up Center," where models go to buy their cosmetics, offers make-up lessons at $7.50 a session. That's a reward you can give yourself which isn't fattening!

Remember, when you are slim, healthy and firm, when your hair is done in the manner that is best for your face, when your make-up brings out the very best YOU... you won't want to "reward yourself" by eating too much, because your reward will be in seeing the admiration in other people's eyes.

Sandy Goes to Roanoke

Sandy, Sinbad frolic on living room floor

Sandra Jeanne Rice spread apart the clothes on the rack with a sweep of her arms, then looked into the lens of the camera, flashing the same smile she had used only a few weeks earlier en route to becoming Miss Virginia Beach.

Sandra, her brown eyes reflecting her anticipation, made last-minute alterations Sunday to the wardrobe she would be wearing this weekend in state competition in Roanoke.

Her chaperone, Mrs. Janet Fishel, held up each dress, describing in detail the occasion for which it was intended. There was a dress for registration, another for dinner, a white swimsuit for photographs, a blue one for competition. There was a cocktail gown for dinner and a magnificent off-white gown for the televised evening gown competition. And, just to be sure, there were several extras for any unplanned event that might occur.

The wardrobe, which Mrs. Fishel said was chosen for "simplicity yet handsomeness," fills the entire back seat of Miss Virginia Beach's new Riviera. And by the time Sandy and Mrs. Fishel stacked all the shoes and luggage, there was barely enough room for them. All the clothes will be on hangers scattered around their hotel room, Mrs. Fishel said, with the corresponding pair of shoes beneath each dress. "That's so that I can just point to the dress and Sandy can put it on in a hurry," Mrs. Fishel said. "You don't have much time at state competition to look around for shoes."

As Sandy walked to her bedroom to change into another playsuit, Mrs. Fishel, a former North Carolina beauty queen, smiled. "Working with that girl has been a pleasure," she said. "She smiles all the time—I really have a good feeling about her."

Saturday, Sandy and Mrs. Fishel's intuition go on trial in Roanoke.

Neighbors Have Great July 4 Parade

"Dolly Madison" leads a portion of the parade that had as its theme "The Beginning."

Every neighborhood should have a Lorraine and Joseph Fava of Bayberry St. and a Loretta and Leslie Harlow of Hatton St.

For eight years, they've been the spark plugs behind a fine July 4th parade, where the young people, the moms and pops and the whole family participate.

It's not just a thrown-together affair either. It reflects thought, and carries a theme. This year's was "The Beginning," and the costumes are made by mom herself.

Monday morning, they were out there again, on Sandalwood Road. "See, we did our sun dance," Jo Fava said. "No rain. We haven't been jinxed in eight years."

True—the clouds were there—but the rain held off.

"Has anyone seen Walter Raleigh?" Lorraine Fava called, as she checked off the names and lined up the parade. "Oh, good, I see Paul Revere made it."

"Let's go," said the youngsters.

"Can't until Uncle Sam gets here," Jo said. About that time down the road strolled 6 ft. 6 in. Clay Hough.

And off they went in formation. And then to a picnic in the yard of Leslie and Loretta Harlow.

In front of the Cape Henry Cross is "Christopher Columbus" Jeff Fava and the Nina Captain, Kenneth Gullion.

Vikings all — Leslie Harlow and Sandy Brown, with junior Vikings, Brian and Bruce Evans.

"Uncle Sam", 6 ft. 6 in. Clay Hough arrives and the parade is on. To his right, Viking Sandy Brown.

Spaceman Gregg Betterton, toting moon rocks, appropriately in a golf cart, pauses in the parade lineup.

Virginia Beach From Offshore - Via A Midnight Cruise

"Look behind you, folks. This is Virginia Beach. This is what it's all about."

Every head onboard the Sea Robin II turned. There, before them, stretched a panorama of beauty that could only be seen from offshore.

The bright lights of the resort pierced the blackened sky. The darkness silhouetted the motels, the distance dwindling them to so many miniature doll houses. A ferris wheel cut its way through a haze of neon, resting in a nest of twirling color. And it was all reflecting in the rolling and crashing Atlantic Ocean.

Captain Earl Paul turned the Sea Robin II into Rudee Inlet, guided her into a berth at the city marina and one more midnight cruise came to an end.

The cruise idea hatched in the ingenious mind of Captain Paul and enabled him to put his beautiful 65-foot luxury craft to double use... a sports fishing charter boat by day, a romantic cruise boat by night.

It has proved to be a tourist highlight at Virginia Beach. The Sea Robin II leaves the municipal marina about 8 p.m., while the shoreline is still light, proceeds to Cape Henry, makes the return trip and arrives at the marina around 10 p.m.

This scheduling provides a look at the Virginia Beach coastline by daylight hours and by night. And the passengers love it, whether tourist or resident.

CAPTAIN EARL PAUL's narration of the cruise is full of information on the resort's oceanfront.

AS THE SEA ROBIN II leaves the marina, the passengers are treated to a full view of the fabulous sports fishing fleet.

THE GROUP ASSEMBLES ON the top deck of the boat as the cruise gets under way about 8 p.m.

THE SIGHTS WERE PRETTY before dark but they were spectacular after the sun completely dropped from sight, much to the delight of the passengers.

PASSENGERS HOLD THEIR BREATH until the boat clears the Rudee Inlet bridge. But there's plenty of room.

PASSENGERS LINE UP AT the rail to see the colorful new Holiday Inn at 45th Street and Oceanfront.

Insurance Attorney Retiring to Beach

Charles G. Dougherty, a Virginia-born attorney who has been executive vice-president, in charge of law, external relations, and secretary's office of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, will leave active service with the company August 31, and will retire in Virginia Beach.

Dougherty's departure will bring to a close a Metropolitan Life career spanning 39 years. Describing Mr. Dougherty's career with the company as brilliant, Board Chairman Gilbert W. Fitzgibbon said: "His contributions to the progress of not only Metropolitan, but the entire life insurance business, have been many and substantial."

Born in Norfolk on Nov. 21, 1907, Dougherty received a bachelor of science degree and his law degree from the University of Virginia, where he was elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa and the Ravens, a Virginia honorary society. He joined Metropolitan Life in 1932 as an attorney in the law division.

During World War II, Dougherty served in the United States Navy for nearly four years, attaining the rank of commander. He received a citation for his role as administrative and operations officer of the air group aboard the aircraft carrier U. S. S. Shangri-La, which participated in the Okinawa campaign and in the strikes against the Japanese home islands.

Upon his release from naval service in 1946, Dougherty was made an officer of Metropolitan Life, with the title of assistant general counsel. Since 1966, when he was appointed vice-president, Dougherty has been responsible for the company's government relations, public relations and advertising programs. He was appointed to his present position of executive vice-president on Dec. 1, 1969. In that post, Dougherty has been responsible for the executive direction of seven Metropolitan Life departments: law, insurance relations, corporate communications, advertising, industrial relations, urban and environmental affairs, and the secretary's office. Effective July, Fitzgibbon explained in his announcement, Dougherty's departments will be divided among three other executives.

Advertising, corporate communications and insurance relations will report to Raymond F. Killon, senior vice president, who in turn will report to Charles A. Siegfried, vice-chairman of the board and chairman of the executive committee. The law department will report to Siegfried. The industrial relations departments and the secretary's office will report to Metropolitan Life President Richard R. Shinn.

Throughout his career, Charles G. Dougherty has been active in insurance industry organizations. He is a past president of the Association of Life Insurance Counsel, and has contributed his energies to the Life Insurance Association of America, the American Life Convention, the Institute of Life Insurance, the Health Insurance Association of America and the Health Insurance Institute.

He has been a director of the Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan New York, Inc., and is a member of the Pilgrims of the United States, the Insurance Society of New York, the Church Club of New York, the University Club, and the Seaside Club. He has also been vice-president of the New York Chamber of Commerce, and chairman of its committee on planning and program development.

Dougherty is married to the former Miss Mary C. Holland of Louisville, Ky. They have two children, Charles William and Mary Elizabeth, and reside on East 66th Street in New York City. Dougherty is a member of the vestry of Manhattan's historic Grace Episcopal Church.

Reflecting on his departure from Metropolitan's active ranks, Dougherty commented, "I've always felt a great sense of satisfaction and gratification to be involved in a business that contributes so much to the economy of our country and the well-being of its people. Everyone in our company, from the clerk to the executive, is contributing by his or her work to the financial security of millions of people. We don't always see it directly from our headquarters building, but that's our whole purpose, our whole being."

As for his executive responsibilities at Metropolitan, Dougherty said simply: "Our efforts have been to try to help make it possible to conduct this business of ours in the most efficient and effective manner."

Dougherty plans to move to Virginia Beach because his family has lived for generations in the Norfolk-Virginia Beach area. A brother, Hugh L. Dougherty, is president of Norfolk's Atlantic Permanent Savings and Loan Association, and lives at Windsor Point in Norfolk. A sister, Mrs. Edward H. Evelt, resides on Baldwin Avenue in Norfolk.

A zealous golfer who does well to break 100 ("But I still love the game"), he concluded: "I haven't made any plans, other than to relax."

Later, while serving as officer-in-charge of a repair barge, he led his men in preparing craft for turnover to the Vietnamese Navy. He also initiated training for the Vietnamese crew.

LT Meiers also served as senior advisor at the intermediate support base at Ben Luc. His initiative in improvising defense and establishing improved maintenance and repair of craft procedures resulted in increased effectiveness of the base.

The citation concluded: "His exemplary professionalism and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the U. S. Naval Service."

LT Meiers was awarded the Bronze Star Medal with combat distinguishing device for service in the Republic of Vietnam.

A citation accompanying the medal commends Meiers with "meritorious service while serving with friendly foreign forces engaged in armed conflict with the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong aggressors."

From the period June 1970 to May 1971, LT Meiers served as senior advisor to the Vietnamese Navy Logistic Support Command's shipping center. He assisted his Vietnamese counterparts in improving their capability in moving vast quantities of combat essential materials.

Suspected 'Scag' Pusher Arrested

A Brooklyn, N.Y. resident described by Virginia Beach as suspected of being one of the "hard core drug pushers" in the area is scheduled to enter court next Friday on charges of alleged possession of heroin with intent to sell.

The suspect was identified as Lawrence Skinner, Jr., age 31. Police said Skinner was arrested in his quarters at the Holiday Inn, in the 700 block of S. Military Highway.

Officials said when Skinner was arrested he allegedly possessed 218 capsules of heroin with an estimated "street sale" value of $1,744. Records indicate Skinner listed his occupation as an unemployed shipping clerk. During his arraignment Skinner was remanded to custody of the city jail in lieu of payment of $10,000 bond pending further court proceedings.

The Planning Commission will also hold its first hearing on the Bayside Land Use Plan, which was deferred from the June 10 meeting, and will hear two applications by the City of Virginia Beach, one pertaining to the construction of a residential building on a lot where more than one building is permitted, and the other modification to the Kempesville Land Use Plan.

The modification to the Kempesville plan will drop the number of dwelling units per acre in the Fox Run-Larkspur area from six to 12 units to one to six units.

The Planning Commission will consider 26 applications in all.

RESCUED—Robert Martin, 25, Donald Ashford, 18, and Deborah Shup, 16, all from Aberdeen, Md., were rescued from a 34-foot houseboat Sunday when the vessel began sinking about a mile off Dam Neck. They were transferred to the charter boat Sea Gull, captained by J.T. Haley, which towed the M Drift-R-Cruz to Rudee Inlet. After breaking tow the houseboat settled to the bottom off Croatan Beach, and was pulled onto the beach through use of a LARC by men of Fort Story and Virginia Beach police during a two hour operation. Martin (in shorts and T shirt) is shown here discussing salvage operations with officials.

Workshop Hosts Student Summer Music

Russell Stanger, music director of the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra, will serve as music director and guest conductor for a week-long string music workshop for junior and senior high school students at Virginia Wesleyan College this summer.

The workshop is being arranged by the College in cooperation with the Norfolk Symphony Association, the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce and the Virginia Beach Friends of Music.

Scheduled for August 15-22, the workshop will feature personal and class instruction with opportunities for students at various levels for violin, viola, cello and string bass. Mrs. Linda Decker, director of the orchestra at Northside Junior High School in Norfolk, and Mrs. Dora Short, concert master of the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra and a member of the Feldman String Quartet, are coordinating the faculty for the workshop. Both will serve on the faculty.

Registration is open to students in grades seven through twelve. Application forms are available through high school and junior high school orchestra directors. Registration will be limited to 100 students. Cost for the week, including room, board and registration will be $50. Those attending are encouraged to live on the Wesleyan campus, but a limited number of day students will be accepted.

Members of the Advisory Committee for the workshop are James C. Ackles, supervisor of music for the Virginia Beach Public High Schools, John B. Ackley, music supervisor in Portsmouth, C. Sidney Berg, supervisor of music for the Norfolk Public Schools, W. Clyde Duvall, Jr., music supervisor in Chesapeake.

on a course paralleling the bridge-tunnel. Tillman was on the bow of the vessel with Jones in the cabin area. When the storm appeared to be increasing in intensity, Woody stated, he attempted to turn the vessel shoreward.

Woody said he then witnessed Jones sitting on the steps leading down into the cabin, and facing into the cabin. He asked Jones "Okay to take her in now?", but Tillman replied "We're going back out" and Jones said to do whatever Tillman wanted.

Tillman had already tied Jones hands together, according to Woody, and at this point made a "garrot" out of a piece of line which he (Tillman) dropped over Jones' head around his neck then lashing the end to the edge of the cabin and pulled it tight around Jones' throat.

These actions were visible to Mrs. Jones, according to Woody, who was sitting in the cabin area.

In answer to his question as to what Tillman thought he was doing, according to Woody, he said he was "going to sell this boat to Diaz." Tillman entered the cabin to bind Mrs. Jones and place a handkerchief over her eyes to prevent her from seeing what was happening.

When Tillman returned to the deck, Woody continued, Jones was less secure as a result of the trimaran's movements and he (Tillman) put his foot on Jones' neck and pushed down "and he (Jones) didn't have a chance."

Woody said he became sick from witnessing what was happening and began vomiting, and was having difficulty breathing due to an asthma attack.

Woody added in describing Tillman's actions "The whole time he's doing this, he's clicking his hawkball knife and laughing about it. Says all of them ought to be dead. They had the world for 6000 years and the black man is going to take it back. I says, 'That's Moslem crap... I don't want no part of it.'"

At this point Tillman, Woody continued, went below to use the bathroom. Woody said he fired two flares into the air in hopes of attracting help from any boat in the area but was unsuccessful.

When Tillman returned to the deck, Woody said, he became involved in sailing the "Skat", and he (Woody) slipped into the cabin and untied Mrs. Jones and gave her a life preserver and told her Tillman intended to "cut her throat."

Woody said Tillman then ordered him to bring Mrs. Jones onto the deck but he refused, and Tillman brought her up. When she lost her footing, according to Woody, Tillman grabbed her by the throat.

Woody's statement here indicated "she didn't fight, she didn't do nothing, she just folded her hands and he just choked her. She didn't even say nothing or didn't do nothing. After he killed her he put a rope in her feet and put her handbag on it and then hooked it onto Mr. Jones."

The statement then indicates it was at this point when Jones was secured to an anchor and thrown overboard.

Woody answered questions as to why he did not attempt to stop Tillman by statements that he was fearful for his own life and that Tillman had a long knife.

He also testified this feat for his own life, coupled with threats Tillman had made regarding Woody's young daughter, stopped him from going to the police after they reached shore safely.

Jones' Murder

Woody also testified that prior to their preliminary hearing in Municipal Court, while they were both detained in the city jail, Tillman agreed to exonerate him of any part in Jones' killing. Tillman failed to do this however, and when questioned later by Woody on his reason Tillman said his lawyer advised him not to.

Woody said Tillman agreed to sign a statement clearing him (Woody). Woody said he drew up the statement on a piece of paper, and because they were quartered in different sections of the jail, sent it to Tillman by means of a trustee identified as Richard Paul Davis, who returned about 15 minutes later with Tillman's signature on the statement.

The statement was read into the court records. It was dated Oct. 10, 1970, addressed to law enforcement officials, and read in part:

"Robert is innocent. I want it known to the court Robert Lee Woody is innocent... did not take part, did not have knowledge until it was going on... I kept him quiet by threat on him and his daughter... Robert Lee Woody is innocent."

During his testimony Woody also stated that a jailer, identified as Frank D'Angelo, witnessed a conversation between Woody and Tillman during which Tillman "would swear I (Woody) had nothing to do with the death of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jones."

D'Angelo testified in court that he heard Woody ask Tillman "you will go to court and tell them I had nothing to do with those murders and Tillman said yes."

D'Angelo also said "Woody asked Tillman if he will tell the truth," in future court proceedings, and Tillman said "yes."

Defense attorney Sachs also attempted to substantiate Woody's plea of innocence in the killing of Jones by calling Tillman to testify.

However when Tillman took the stand he refused to answer certain questions posed to him on grounds of self incrimination, in that he is faced with trial for the killing of Jones.

Questions which he refused to answer included "Were you in the company of Robert Lee Woody on last Sept. 3? ... Did you go on a boat with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jones? ... Did you ever know Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jones? ... Since you have been in jail did you ever tell anybody Woody had nothing to do with the murder of Jones?"

Tillman did however give affirmative replies to questions regarding his knowing Richard Paul Davis and jailer Frank D'Angelo since being confined to city jail.

C & P On Strike

These workers include management. . . Patrick was manning the switchboard himself Wednesday morning as pickets gathered outside the business office.

The real pressure will come in installing new telephones, he said.

"We have a very, very minimum of outside force for new installations," Patrick commented, "and they will be kept busy, no doubt, on out of order conditions and other service calls. We are going to do our very best to keep up the service to our present customers."

Patrick was vague about when the strike might come to an end. "Hopefully it will be terminated at a very early date," he said, "but I have no idea when it might be."

Over 100 telephone workers in Virginia Beach went out on strike Wednesday morning in the national communications strike called by the Communications Workers of America, affiliate of the AFL/CIO.

Floyd Patrick, manager of the local Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company office, said that 111 workers did not report for work as the strike went into effect.

The striking force was broken down this way, Patrick said: 21 out of the business office on Mustang Trail, 47 in installation and repairs, 15 in tolls and special services and 28 in construction.

The local office is operating on a skeleton staff of 20 persons in the business office, he said, plus a few non-union workers.

Boulevard Priority Item In New Study

By Les Lehigh

The long-awaited improvements to Virginia Beach Boulevard to relieve increasing traffic congestion on that busy thoroughfare is now a step closer to becoming a reality.

Preliminary engineering plans and proposals for the project have already been completed and have been submitted to the Virginia State Highway Department for approval.

The main objective of the project, according to those connected with it, is to improve the flow of traffic over the Boulevard and hopefully bring about a decrease in the number of traffic accidents along the roadway.

A primary reason behind the project is the rapid increase in the number of motorists travelling the Boulevard. Traffic engineers point out that while this fact was a motivating factor behind the construction of the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway, traffic along the Boulevard now has exceeded the volume at the start of construction of the Expressway.

Officials also point out traffic on the Expressway has now exceeded earlier peak volume estimates.

Officials connected with consulting firms which designed the improvements indicate the project involves that portion of Virginia Beach Boulevard between London Bridge Creek and Ingleside Road in Norfolk. The initial phase of the project, however, will be concerned with approximately seven miles of roadway between London Bridge Creek and Newtown Road in Virginia Beach.

The improvements basically revolve around revising the present system of traffic control signals and utilizing existing service roads to create an eight-lane highway. This will result in four lanes each in a westerly direction, and like number in an easterly direction.

Project spokesmen are quick to point out this will be carried out without the acquisition of additional right-of-ways, and will not necessitate the acquiring of any land which is presently privately owned bordering the feeder roads.

Engineers indicate the additional two lanes in each direction will be realized through converting existing service roads to the handling of two lanes of one-way traffic, with traffic moving in the same direction as that on the adjacent portion of the Boulevard.

These roads in their present state, according to engineers, can safely handle this traffic with the exception of a few isolated locations.

These same spokesmen point out this can be rectified through converting portions of the existing median dividing service roads from the Boulevard to additional feeder road space, without the necessity of acquiring privately owned land bordering the service roads.

Another major change in the present service road system will be the creation of a number of "turn around points" between major intersections, which will, in essence, allow motorists to reverse their direction of travel by making U-turns under safely controlled conditions. This will be accomplished through the

Summer Flying by for POW's-Sons

Jerry prepares for take-off.

By Howard Swindle

Actually, the airborne advertising division of South Norfolk Air Service is rather small. There's Jerry Denton, Chief pilot, salesman, treasurer and general overseer of the operation. His brother, 18-year-old Bill, is the ground crew. The operations building is a pickup truck with a camper on the back. The air field was a farmland before the summer began.

But, despite all the unlikely circumstances, Jerry Denton, a 24-year-old former helicopter pilot with Vietnam experience, manages to stay busy towing gliders, red-lettered banners behind the small Piper Super Cub.

waiting for the next take-off.

"Last week, I had four tows every day," Jerry said after it became too dark for his ads to be seen. "Today I had nine and tomorrow I've got eight more." He said he leased the makeshift landing field because it's only five minutes from the beach. The company's hanger at South Norfolk Airport is 20 minutes away from the plane's regular track from Rudee Inlet to Fort Story and back again.

Bill discussed the sign-towing operation Saturday while he readied another banner as it lay in the weeds beside the landing strip. "Actually, there's no real system," he said. "I just try to have another banner waiting when Jerry gets back." But that's where the problem lies. They only have a limited number of letters—an unfortunate dilemma which often sends Bill scurrying from one sign to another hunting a crucial letter.

After Bill spells out the advertisement in four-foot red letters, he attaches the end of the banner between two upright posts. Jerry flies in at about 30 feet with a three-pronged hook trailing from the Piper. Ideally, the hook snags the banner, jerking it skyward behind the plane. Saturday, however, Jerry had to make two passes on one sign. Bill smiled. "Would you believe that's the first time he's missed?"

Jerry drops the banners by pushing a lever on the floor of the cockpit. He's gotten so adept at jettisoning the banners in the right place that Bill seldom has to move them off the strip.

Bill's face breaks into an embarrassed grin when you ask him if he's ever misspelled a banner. "Well, last week we left the 'u' out of 'boutique'," he said, "but that really wasn't our fault—it was spelled like that on the (job) sheet." Saturday, Bill linked one advertisement on the front of his tee shirt just so he'd have a ready reference.

There may be only two women in the organization, but that's no sign there's a lack of quality control. After Jerry snags the sign, he passes back over the strip so that Bill has time to proofread the banner. If it's right, Bill gives the thumbs up sign.

Jerry and Bill, sons of Commander and Mrs. Jeremiah Denton Jr., use the profits of their summer jobs to finance college. Jerry will return to Dominican College in Wisconsin while Bill will be a sophomore at Virginia Wesleyan. Their father, also a pilot, has been a prisoner of war for more than six years.

Jerry got his foothold in aviation via an Army tour in Vietnam where he piloted a Huey Cobra gunship. After returning from Vietnam, Jerry began working toward his fixed-wing license. "I had about six months before school started so I took fixed-wing lessons," Jerry said. He also worked as an "all-round handy man" at the airport.

Jerry applied last summer for the banner-towing job and found it waiting for him when he returned from school at the first of the summer.

Though most of the banners are towed along the resort areas, Jerry also flies some unusual requests. Recently he took a welcome home banner several miles into the Atlantic to meet a carrier returning after deployment. According to Bill, Jerry had his hands full. "The plane doesn't have a lot of instruments and there was a storm brewing, too," he said.

Despite the pace of the job (Jerry's day begins at 7 a.m. and often doesn't end until 11 p.m.), he'd be the first to admit it's a better flying assignment than his last one.

Bill lies the lines.

Little Neck - Lynnhaven Plan Briefing Monday

The Little Neck-Lynnhaven Land Use Plan will get its first public briefing Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Plaza Junior High School and will be set up today for viewing in the Windsor Woods Branch Library on Plaza Trail.

The plan may also be set up at Thalia Volunteer Fire Department, Planner Pat Gomez said, but that location had not been confirmed Wednesday.

This particular plan, the sixth in a series of seven, encompasses 25 square miles in the heart of Virginia Beach and the city's highest concentration of population.

There are some 41,000 persons living in the area that is bounded on the north by the Lynnhaven tip between the Eastern and Western branches of the Lynnhaven River and on the south by the VEPCO right-of-way.

It includes such high density communities as Princess Anne Plaza, the Malibu, area, Timberlake, Brennenman Farms, Mast Farm on Holland Road and Green Run. Because of these latter developments, it also includes the highest concentration of multi-family development in the city.

The plan, as presently drafted, will allow this high density development to continue where it is already established, but it will also recommend acreage for agriculture, commercial and industrial development. The lowest density in the area will be the Lynnhaven tip where sites are one of more acres each.

Some 1,000 acres will be recommended for development of light industry. This area will be south of the Expressway and east of South Lynnhaven Road. The section's close proximity to the Oceana Naval Air Station makes it undesirable for any other type development.

Gomez said, and the soil is too poor for agriculture.

A large plot in the southern end of the area does have excellent soil, however, and the plan recommends that it be retained for agriculture.

Three major municipal parks are also included in the plan, including the 166-acre Mount Trashmore refuse land fill project and two abandoned sewage treatment plants owned by private utility companies.

"These, plus the neighborhood semi-private parks required in the PUD areas, should give us the five acres per 1,000 people standard," Gomez said.

The commercial district will primarily follow Virginia Beach Boulevard, as it now does, only it will be expanded for a higher concentration of commercial development.

The plan also recommends preservation of three historical buildings, Rose Hall, which for many years has been an exclusive women's shop, Aldo Farms and the Powell House.

The Powell House was built in the 1760's, Gomez said, "and we hope it can be included along with the better known buildings." It is located at the corner of Kensington and Great Neck Road.

The Virginia Beach Buggy Association, still reeling from a Department of Interior ruling which would ban vehicular traffic at Back Bay Wildlife Refuge received support Tuesday from another organization in its fight to keep the beach open.

Walter Leveridge, who said he represented the Concerned Citizens for Conservation and Recreation, pledged his 50-member organization will "fight this thing as vividly as we can." He circulated several petitions at the buggy association's meeting which he said would be sent to congressmen and senators in Virginia and North Carolina and to Department of Interior officials.

More than 75 people, mostly members of the beach buggy association, turned out at Green Run Center to voice their opposition to the recent Department of Interior ruling which would close 4.3 miles of Back Bay beach to vehicular traffic beginning next year. According to a letter from the department to the Virginia Beach city council, "substantial property owners" would be the only persons permitted to drive on the beach.

The buggy association adopted

Sabbath' Crowd-Pleaser; 'Project' Disappointing

Black Sabbath Night at the Virginia Beach Dome-Monday, July 13 - was nothing less than far out. It was far better than their last concert here several months ago.

From the time the Black Sabbath started to roll, the crowd couldn't stop moving. The group played like "Iron Man," "Paranoid," "Wicked World" and, of course, "Black Sabbath".

They gave the audience a sneak preview of their new album, not yet released, by playing a few cuts from that. It seemed pretty obvious from the reaction of the crowd that they'll have another hit on their hands. On Monday night they were plenty loud and really got it on through the whole evening. It was a superb showing of the talent of the group.

Sharing the spotlight with the Black Sabbath in this concert was the Blues Project. They came on first and, unfortunately, left a lot to be desired. They were sloppy in their presentation and appeared to be quite unorganized, which is inexcusable when sharing a billing with a top notch group like the Sabbath. The Blues Project really disappointed the crowd. But the Sabbath more than made up for it. When the show came to an end, the audience stood and cheered and called the Sabbath back for one more number. There was no doubt about it... they were a big hit!

D. C. CURRENT BY CYRENE DEAR

Eleven million voters have now been added in this country. President Nixon signed the 28th Amendment to the Constitution in an Independence Day ceremony July 5th in the East Room of the White House.

The President was in a very happy mood. He looked tanned and rested. He even joked a little as he signed the historic document on the Thomas Jefferson desk, where the third President drafted the Declaration of Independence. It was borrowed from the Diplomatic Room in the Department of State where it is on loan from its owner George Holcombe of Philadelphia.

Three eligible voters witnessed the document officially - Julianne Jones of Memphis, Tenn.; Joseph Loyd, Jr., Detroit, Michigan; and Paul Laremer, Concord, Calif. Each kept the pen with which he signed.

The President said, "I wish there were enough pens for all the other young people from the 'Young Americans in Concert' who are sharing this historic event with us today."

No sooner said than accomplished. Before the ceremonies ended, enough pens had been obtained from the warehouse, so each of the 540 members of the Concert group received a pen souvenir.

The East Room literally shook with shouts and applause.

Robert Kunzig, General Services Administrator, certified the Amendment which was made possible by Congressional vote in January 1971 and the required ratification of three-fourths of the states. Ohio became the 38th state to allow 18-19-20 year olds the right to vote in all elections.

They young characters in their blue blazer uniforms sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" with beauty and reverence. The President said, "I have heard it sung at least 800 times, but never has it had such an effect on me as today." The Glory Hallelujahs were truly an exclamation of praise to God.

The group left for a 28-day concert tour of Europe, opening in Albert Hall London and ending at the Basilica of Massenzio at the Roman Forum.

One young girl singer, while waiting for the White House ceremony to begin, said, "I am so excited that I think I will explode. This is the most important thing that has ever happened to me."

She and the 539 other singers listened dutifully as President Nixon advised them on what to tell Europeans about America as they went forth on their goodwill tour.

He won quite a few voters from this enthusiastic group with singers representing almost every state. After the ceremony they strolled through the public rooms while the band played popular music. They completed the festivities with punch and cookies in the State Dining Room.

Deborah Scholarship Recipient

Deborah McNulty has been chosen recipient of a $250 scholarship sponsored by the Oceana Officers All Wives Club. Deborah, a 1971 graduate of Kempsville High School, was chosen from nineteen applicants on the basis of high academic standing and outstanding involvement in extra-curricular activities. This is the first time Oceana has awarded such a scholarship. Deborah plans to attend Longwood College where she will major in elementary education with an emphasis in physical education. Her primary interest is sports, including hockey and gymnastics. Deborah is the daughter of Chief and Mrs. Daniel McNulty, residents of the Kempsville area. She is one of five children. Chief McNulty works in Personnel at Oceana, in charge of career counseling. The scholarship was presented to Deborah by Mrs. Eleanor Rodgers, president of the Oceana Officer All Wives Club.

Conflict

a motion by former president Ray Scorgis to establish a fact-finding committee to compile background information and statistics. Mrs. Fisk, current president of the association, said he would appoint the committee within two days.

Virginia Beach city councilman Reid Ervin told the group to formulate a plan and submit it to city council for its help. "That's the only way to get a positive reaction from the council and Department of Interior," he said.

Referring to a mass meeting of more than 2,000 who spoke out after last year's public outcry, Ervin said, "I don't believe a large group like that will accomplish much." The Department of Interior withdrew its plan to close the beach to traffic after last year's public outcry. Leveridge, of 4923 Athens Blvd., said the Conservation and Recreation is made up of residents of both Virginia and North Carolina. "There's a place for wildlife and there's a place for human beings," Leveridge said. He said the beach currently open to traffic totals about 60 acres. "That's 60 acres out of 9,000 for recreation," he said. Leveridge said his group also intends to retain a "non-biased ecologist" to conduct a study of the effects of vehicular traffic on the beach. Several members of the buggy association indicated they will attend the June 23 meeting of the North Carolina Beach Buggy Association where they plan to discuss the closure of Back Bay. Announcement of the Department of Interior's decision to close Back Bay to vehicular traffic came Friday in a letter to City Manager Roger Scott. C.E. Carlson, Atlanta-based regional director of the department's Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, said the action is necessary because of an inability to adequately protect the refuge. Carlson revealed a study, conducted by the Department of Interior in June which showed 410 violations. Another study, Carlson said, showed more than 3,000 criminal violations on the 4.2 miles of refuge beach in 1970. According to the letter, property owners south of the refuge beach will have to prove they are "substantial property owners" in order to get a special permit allowing them to drive on the beach. Carlson said certified land owners would travel the new 1.3-mile roadway to refuge headquarters where they would be permitted to drive the remaining three miles along the refuge beach.

This Play Is Avant-Garde At Its Best

While the dinner theatres put together musicals with large casts, astronomical royalties and gourmet food to entertain the public, the Norfolk Theatre Center on Freemason Street with a cast of two, a producer and director has put together a play in the great tradition of Beckett, Sartre, Genet and Camus. Its message is true to "The Theatre of the Absurd" states clearly that mankind moves from reality to fantasy and from fantasy to reality and that to escape is to pay a price. "Home Free" is the work of Lanford Wilson who has been writing since 1964 for off-Broadway and small coffeehouse theatres and is a major and important playwright. This avant-garde play deals not with the individual guilt and conscience of man but the universal guilt and conscience of mankind. The action of the play takes place in a one room boarding house, or rather, it takes place not only there, but in the existence of every man. It is a stimulating, disturbing play that will stay with you long after the more conventional and entertaining plays are forgotten. The actors, Mike Hunter as Lawrence and Margaret Lunsford as Joanna form a mysterious union between playwright, director and themselves to mirror and absorb the words and mood of the play. It is beautifully acted from the first moment of contact with the audience as Lawrence lectures learnedly to imaginary children about stars that turns into a lavishly decorated small ferris wheel. Does the author symbolize life as the ups and downs of a carousel? Why is ZOT on the blackboard? Why Snoopy, Batman, a red inflatable chair, a double bed on stage? Is this a nursery where the idiot-genius is kept by his parents or is this a man's mind cluttered with the functional and childish? Joanna comes in from shopping and they discuss her adventure referring to the landlady as Miss Frunke who will throw them out as soon as the expected baby Miss Brown arrives. Their misery is matched by their happiness and this real, individual situation corresponds to a total, absolute condition of man in his joy and sorrow. In the end Lawrence must substitute the fantasy for the reality and the audience is left to justify his decision. The play ends on a lightning sense of discovery so that the audience sits bemused while the ferris wheel turns in a blaze of light. Mike Hunter plays the brother/husband, idiot-genius with a skill and depth that is magnificent. His characterization of the frightened, stuttering, anti-hero is one of substance filled with sound and fury. It is a demanding part and Mr. Hunter is unbelievably excellent. Margaret Lunsford is well known as a fine actress; she is not a showcase of emotions but a crucible of clarity created from the basic and specific essence of theatre. She does not interpret the character as much as she is refused with the spirit of this girl and grafts the personality into her own consciousness. It is a brilliant portrayal.

The ferris wheel done by Skip Grau is a thing of art and beauty. Together with the sound tracks from PATCH OF BLUE and THE BIRD WITH THE CRYSTAL PLUMAGE (Agony or Ecstasy) the play becomes fluid and expressive.

David Nichols the producer used money he had saved for a trip to Australia to mount and produce this play. Bob Capri directed it. They had something to say and the theatre grows a bit because of them. Mr. Capri who has worked as an actor-teacher for the Virginia Museum in Richmond will present with "HOME FREE" a one-act play "Aria da Capo," by Edna St. Vincent Millay. Performances are at 8:30 p.m. July 15, 16 and 17 and 2:30 p.m. Sunday, July 18. The Millay play is presented by the Magic Mine Theatre of America which was endowed by the National Foundation of Arts and Humanities this past season.

installation of traffic control signals at key points, and permit motorists moving along the present service roads to safely cross the Boulevard and reverse their direction.

The purpose of this move, according to engineers, is to curtail the increasing number of accidents resulting from motorists presently attempting to cross lanes of oncoming traffic for the purpose of reversing their direction along the Boulevard.

Reversing of the traffic control signals will be accomplished in two steps. This initially involves the installation of additional traffic signals, plus the synchronization of all traffic signals to permit a progressive flow of traffic along the thoroughfare. Present plans call for the improvements to be financed primarily under a federal program referred to as "TOPICS," a traffic operations program for increased capacity and safety.

This will result in the City of Virginia Beach bearing only 15 percent of the total project cost. The federal government would bear 50 percent of the project cost, with the remaining 35 percent being covered by State funds. While no firm estimate of the project's total cost has been made at this time, one project spokesman was quoted with saying "it will be expensive." This spokesman points out the largest portion of the expense will be involved in the traffic control signal system. Officials are unable at present to estimate the date of the start of construction on the project. They point out this is dependent upon approval of preliminary plans by the State Highway Department, completion of final engineering plans, and government approval of the project to qualify for federal funding.

One spokesman was however more definite regarding the completion of the project. He said, "Once the final plans are prepared, construction of the entire project should not take more than a year."

Little Visitor Welcomed

John Griffin, general manager of the Sun, says the strangest things sometimes happen out in his neighborhood of Lynnhaven.

That's not so titfied out there that all sorts of strange animals have given up visiting unsuspecting residents.

It seems that at sundown Monday two strange creatures resembling squirrels went tearing across the Griffin's lawn. Lickety-split they went racing up a tree. The Griffin children, Meyer, 12, and Roger, 10, rushed out to see what was causing the commotion, and discovered that two small raccoons were now lodged safely and tightly up in the tree. This was good because by this time the neighborhood dogs had discovered them. During a lull when the dogs momentarily gave up the vigil, one little racoon escaped and disappeared. The other baby clung to his high perch. That's the way the situation was when the Griffins retired for the night. Came daybreak and the children were out at the tree where the furry friend was still holding on for dear life.

About 11 a.m. Griffin had an urgent call from Mrs. Griffin. "You better come home," she said, "the racoon fell out of the tree and the children have him bedded down in the dog's wicker basket with a quilt over him and they're giving him water and blue fish."

By now the whole Lynnhaven neighborhood is involved in saving the baby racoon, and encyclopedias are being thoroughly studied to determine the care and feeding of racoons.

Lcdr. Meyer Retires

LCDR Deloy A. Meyer, USNH of Virginia Beach, Virginia, retired recently at the Naval Air Reserve Training Unit NAS, Norfolk. As part of the retirement ceremony, a full dress white inspection was held during quarters, commemorating his 20 years Naval service.

LCDR Meyer first enlisted in the Navy in August 1950 as a seaman recruit. He entered the Naval Cadet Program in March 1952 and received primary flight training at NAS Pensacola, Florida. He was designated a Naval Aviator and received his commission as Ensign in September 1953.

In November 1968 he reported to NARTU Norfolk from NAS Twin Cities, Minneapolis, Minnesota. Prior to assuming his most recent assignment at NARTU as Aviation Technical Training Officer, he was VR Program Manager and Instrument Training Officer serving under Navy's Training and Administration of Reserves (TAR) Program.

Financial Aid Available To Landowners

Timberland owners in Virginia Beach are now eligible to receive financial assistance from the State for reforestation activities.

The funds for the program are available under the Pine Reforestation of Timberlands Act passed by the General Assembly.

The money to finance this incentive program comes from a self-imposed tax on the pine-using industry matched with a like amount from the State General Fund. The increased planting or pine will assure increased production of raw materials, provide a base for necessary environmental and multiple-use activities, and increase the economic and aesthetic values of all reforested areas.

The Virginia Division of Forestry is purchasing added heavy equipment for rental to potential participants in this program, plus several extra technical forestry personnel are being employed to assist in the anticipated work load increase.

Forest landowners who wish to participate in the program have several options open to them. Briefly these include procedures which, when the project is completed, would make landowners eligible for reimbursement of a portion of the costs incurred by him, or the granting of a loan to finance his project.

The program is being administered under supervision of the Virginia Division of Forestry, and complete information may be obtained by contacting the Division's office in Portsmouth, Va., telephone 468-1921.

Mystery Girl Traffic Fatality

Mystery surrounds the true identity of the young woman who became the resort city's 15th traffic fatality of the year when she succumbed to injuries Tuesday evening at the Medical College of Virginia Hospital in Richmond.

When making a recent application for a work permit in the city she listed her name as Debbie Lindner, listing her address on 16th Street. However officials indicate a number of people who knew her say she also used the names of Debbie Conyers and Debbie Collins.

Her work permit application listed her birthplace as Solingen, Germany, leading authorities to be she may be the daughter of a military man.

Efforts by police during the past two weeks to locate Debbie's family, and/or surviving relatives, have been fruitless. There are however strong indications that she may have relatives living in the area of Fayetteville, N.C.

Debbie was critically injured in a motorcycle accident July 1 receiving severe brain damage. She remained in the intensive medical care unit of Norfolk General Hospital until Monday when she was transferred to MCV where her death occurred approximately 24 hours later.

David Forkner (left) is the new 28-year-old chief of the comprehensive planning department and with him are some of the other "new faces" around the Planning Department . . . David Smith, a summer intern, Ken Ainsley, draftsman, Walter Monahan, comprehensive planner, and Michael Hartley, another intern.

Youth and Vigor and A New Frontier in Planning Department

The City Planning Department is the New Frontier of the municipal departments. Certainly it has enough youth and vigor scurrying through its busy offices to qualify it as such.

No less than seven new employees have reported for duty there in recent weeks-two are summer interns-and they are strictly members of the "under 30" group.

There's David Forkner, for instance, the new chief of the comprehensive planning department. He's meticulously mod in dress, thin-rimmed glasses, wide tie, Edwardian coats and, of course, the slightly longer haircut.

He's only 28 but even at that young age he had an impressive background when he took over the department about eight weeks ago. He was granted a Master's Degree in planning from the University of Tennessee in 1968 and became a VISTA volunteer as an advocate planner in South Georgia for the Federal Government's Model Cities Agency. When he accepted the Virginia Beach position he was a planner for 16 counties and 43 cities in the Eastern Tennessee Development District.

David, a bachelor, lives in an apartment in Green Run but is keeping his eyes open for an old home he can restore. "A building must have some age on it before it has any personality," he said.

In David's department, the planners devise the long-range land use plans for the various sections of the city. The plans are not compulsory to the city's development but they are extremely useful as guidelines in zoning matters. With City Council breathing down the Planning Department's neck for the long-awaited zoning ordinance, which hopefully will relieve the tug-of-war between apartment builders and city administration, the pressure is really on to complete all the plans. Then the way will be clear for the final drafting of the zoning ordinance.

And that's why the comprehensive planning department is the pressure point, why sharp, enthusiastic young men have been added to the staff to speed matters up. Charles Carrington, Planning Director, is on a deadline to complete the ordinance. Council told him to get the help he needed to do the job. So he did. The Bayside plan just went before the Planning Commission, the Little Neck-Lynnhaven plan is ready for its first public briefing and the Princess Anne plan, the final one of seven plans, is already in the mill.

Carrington, who may not qualify for membership in the "under 30" group but nevertheless has that New Frontier look about him, sought exceptionally trained personnel for this comprehensive planning department. He found David, with a Master's Degree, and he also found Walter Monahan, a brand new graduate of the University of Virginia with a Master's in planning.

Monahan, 29, is the oldest of the new employees. He is a native of Rhode Island but chose to stay in Virginia after he graduated because of the challenge of the phenomenal growth of the City of Virginia Beach. He and his wife, Helen, have a 2-year-old daughter and live in Lynnhaven Acres.

The two summer interns are working in this department, backing up the regular staff. David Smith, 26, and Michael Hartley, 24, are both seeking a Master's Degree in urban planning from the University of Tennessee-which, by the way, is Carrington's alma mater. The internship is required in order to get the advanced degree.

David, who hails from Savannah, Tenn., is spending the summer with friends near the Princess Anne Plaza area and Michael, whose permanent home is Arlington, lives with his wife, Joan, on 16th Street. Moving on to the other departments, there's Brian Vandewalle, 22, an assistant program planner whose job is to seek out the availability of Federal funds for special projects.

It has been a busy summer for Brian. He graduated from Ball State University in Muncie, Indiana, with a degree in planning and political science, got married on June 26 and joined the Planning Department on July 1. Brian and his bride, Elizabeth, spent their honeymoon on their way to Virginia Beach. They, too, live in Green Run.

The "baby" of the group is 18-year-old Ken Ainsley. He graduated from Kempville High School in June and stepped into the department as a draftsman, which he hopes to make his life's work.

Least, but certainly not least, comes the undisputed beauty of the group, Mrs. Joyce Holcomb, a vivacious brunette, is Carrington's private secretary and she's likely to be found at the receptionist's desk or filling in at any spot she's needed. "She's our Girl Friday," laughs Carrington.

Joyce is no stranger to city administration. She has been a clerk-stenographer for the past two years in the Office of Real Estate in the Department of Community Services but on July 1 transferred into planning.

Formerly of Atlanta, Georgia, she moved to Virginia Beach three years ago when her husband, the Reverend W. Jerry Holcomb, accepted the ministry of King's Grant Baptist Church. They live in King's Grant with their three year old daughter.

Joins Bank

Joseph T. Kyofski has joined People's Bank of Virginia Beach as comptroller, according to J. Burton Harrison, Jr., president of the bank.

Kyofski came to People's Bank from his prior position as Treasurer for United Mortgage Servicing Corp.

A native of Pennsylvania with a Master's Degree in Accounting from Pennsylvania State University, Kyofski moved to the South in 1959. His background includes seventeen years of experience in accounting and finance.

Wilson Is New Dean

Dr. William M. Wilson, associate professor of religion at Wofford College in South Carolina, is the new academic dean at Virginia Wesleyan College.

Dr. Wilson's appointment as Dean of the College and Associate Professor of Religion was announced here by President Lambuth M. Clarke. He will assume his duties on September 1.

An Alabama native, Dr. Wilson, 41, has been a member of the Wofford College faculty since 1960. He first served as chaplain and assistant professor of religion and began fulltime teaching in the department of religion and philosophy in 1966. He has served as acting chairman of that department during the past academic session.

Dr. Wilson's birthplace is Fiveforks, Alabama although he attended elementary and high school in Birmingham. He holds an A.B. degree from Birmingham Southern College and two graduate degrees, including the Ph.D. degree, from Vanderbilt University.

The son of Mrs. R. C. Wilson and the late Rev. R. C. Wilson, the new Wesleyan dean, an ordained United Methodist minister, served several churches in Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky prior to his appointment at Wofford in 1960. He also served for the 1956-57 academic session as director of religious life and instructor in religion at Birmingham Southern College in Birmingham, Alabama.

Dr. Wilson has been chairman of a number of committees at Wofford including the Committee on Interdisciplinary Core Courses and the Committee on Faculty Standing and Evaluation. He is currently working with a special committee on the Humanities under a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. He is secretary of the Association of Colleges and Universities for International Intercultural Studies and in 1967 participated in a two-month study travel tour in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

Mrs. Wilson is the former Martha Jo Barnes of Clemson, South Carolina. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Barnes of Clemson. Dr. and Mrs. Wilson have a son and two daughters.

In announcing Dr. Wilson's appointment, President Clarke said: "Virginia Wesleyan is most fortunate to secure the services of Dr. William M. Wilson as Dean of the College. Dr. Wilson comes to us with a rich educational background as an undergraduate, a graduate student and a faculty member at three outstanding institutions. His experience in innovative programs as chairman of Wofford College's Committee on Interdisciplinary Core Courses will be valuable to Virginia Wesleyan as he assumes the academic leadership of our rapidly developing college."

Dr. Stephen S. Mansfield, who has been serving as coordinator of academic affairs at Virginia Wesleyan for the 1970-71 academic session, will return to fulltime teaching in history and has been named chairman of the Division of the Social Sciences.

President Clarke said, "Dr. Mansfield has rendered outstanding service as Coordinator of Academic Affairs during the past year. Our college is fortunate to have on its faculty a young scholar with the ability and dedication of this teacher."

We Deserve It!

Two private citizens appeared before City Council Monday on two unrelated matters but their requests certainly should make council realize that there must be reconsideration of some of our ordinances.

Mr. Henry Keeling proposed, that a committee be formed to study the possibility of establishing laws under which this city might control and correct air and water pollution.

The city is apparently helpless in correcting such matters as overflowing septic tanks and overloaded private utility lines. The city apparently can do nothing when it sees its own waterways being destroyed, its shellfish condemned.

But for another citizen, Reverend George Stallings of First Colonial Baptist Church, it was quite another matter. He opposed such ordinances as the anti-litter ordinance which he said deprives Virginia Beach citizens of their Constitutional right to freedom of press, religion and speech. The minister and one of his young workers were jailed under this ordinance last week because they were distributing religious pamphlets, which might become litter.

In one situation, there are no laws for protection of our environment or our health. In the other situation law is so strict it does not even allow distribution of religious material.

This city continues to receive adverse publicity because of its rather lopsided views of what is right and what is wrong. One of the saddest things to happen was the condemnation of the Western Branch of the Lynnhaven River, a deplorable situation which did not happen over night. Yet, nothing was done to stop a situation officials have known about for years. How can we, all of us, be so blind, so apathetic to let such a tragic thing happen? Mr. Keeling commented that he shared the blame; Councilman Reid Ervin commented that "we all share the blame". True, everyone who knew about the gradual pollution should have fought in every way possible to keep it from happening. Just as Reverend Stallings is fighting to bring into balance those laws which persecute and deprive rather than protect and control.

If this city would direct its attention toward the important matters, such as orderly development, anti-pollution, a solution to the pressing school problem, better sewage, a city water system and a few other little-items like that, rather than arresting visitors for sleeping in cars, young people witnessing for Christ, and ministers for operating a church without a use permit or distributing religious literature, then Virginia Beach would be a much bigger city in spirit and in heart if not in size.

Virginia Beach can ill afford the publicity it's receiving for these things. But it certainly deserves it.

Proceed With Caution

Young people have been given the right to vote, not just in federal elections but in all elections. And rightfully so. If they are to fight the wars their political leaders involve this country in, then those who chance to lose the most-their lives-surely are entitled to a voice in electing those leaders.

On the other hand, it is a grave responsibility, one which must not be taken lightly. Hopefully, the young people will recognize this and will make it their duty, as Americans, to know each candidate to the best of their ability, not just vote blindly without knowledge of the man.

Youth has been crying out for a voice in the shaping of their country, believing their elders have failed them. And maybe they have. But shaping the country is more than voting for the candidate who uses marijuana as his platform or stressing welfare reforms that provide continuing funds for those who make no effort. It is more than a candidate who knows the right thing to wear, the correct way to turn and the proper thing to say. It is more than burning down campus buildings and running rampant through the streets of our nation's capitol.

Responsibility separates the man from the boy. The man accepts it, struggles with it, studies it and, finally, conquers it. The boy ignores it then grows defiant because he cannot cope with it.

The boy, eighteen years of age and over, now has the responsibility of voting. He can ignore it, true, and continue to rebel because he doesn't like what is happening to his country. Or he can be the man the law now decrees him to be and exercise his American right...providing he fully understands for whom, and for what, he is voting.

This law will undoubtedly have great impact on this country's future. It is the answer to the rebel's cry. He is no longer the forgotten American, he can now express himself politically without violence and destruction. If he will register, study his candidate and vote, he will become a mature, responsible American. Youth needs such maturity. And American needs such youth.

City Council is to be commended for its fast action Friday in a special meeting in appealing the Federal Court's revision of the Virginia redistricting plan. And the General Assembly is also to be commended for taking the same action on Thursday.

This city has its legislators to thank for such prompt defense of its citizens on both the state and local level. It was most rewarding that Senator Edward Caton and Delegate B. R. Middleton fought the battle for Virginia Beach before the General Assembly, then pled their case before City Council.

The nearly thirty thousand people in Bayside, plus the sixteen or so thousand in Kempsville and Pungo and the others involved in the border district, all of whom will be lost to Virginia Beach elections if the appeal does not go through, must get some satisfaction at least in knowing that their officials went to bat for them.

It is totally unrealistic that four Federal judges would deem it wise to place thirty thousand Virginia Beach residents with sixteen thousand Norfolk residents in one district so Norfolk might have an additional delegate. It seems totally unrealistic that they would move the floater district from Virginia Beach, Portsmouth and Chesapeake to Northern Virginia where the rate of growth is nothing compared to the growth of this city.

It was bad enough when the General Assembly in its plan syphoned off some of our citizens into a border district but it was nothing compared to the discriminatory action of the four Federal Court judges.

Thank goodness this city took immediate action. Such imposed injustice must not be accepted without at least a struggle to right the wrong.

CARE Aids Pakistan Refugees

To the Editor:

CARE's staff in India is sending urgent cables for relief supplies that will help save the lives of more than 6 million men, women and children who have crossed over the border from Pakistan. They are hungry and homeless, and unless their needs can be met the human family will suffer an enormous tragedy. More than 3,000,000 of them are without shelter from the heavy monsoon rains now descending on the area.

CARE's resident staff in India already is distributing 3,930 tons of food and 12,000 large tarpaulins to shelter as many people as we can. Yet our emergency funds now are exhausted and we can only turn to the American public to finance the further massive relief efforts that must be made. I earnestly hope that your readers will want to make contributions towards CARE's relief work in India. Money for this purpose may be sent to: Emergency Relief Fund, CARE, 1028 Connecticut Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Laws Slave to Money

To the Editor:

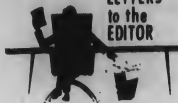

Mrs. Robert Geier, wife of "one of the few clean cut American men left in this country", now knows why the "hippy types" look, and particularly, think as they do. In Virginia Beach, as in the nation, both government and law are the slave and tool of the powerful, vested, commercial interests. They do not, and are not designed to, serve the citizen of city, state, or nation.

On a smaller, shall we say petty, plane, the law designed to force campers into hotels or campgrounds is worse than self-serving. Most hotels have more legitimate guests than they can handle, disregarding their "inflated" prices. Seashore state park turns away campers every day. By law these people are banished from the city. Hotels are not the city's only industry. We have restaurants, food stores, gift shops and amusement activities which would benefit from non-hotel guests.

As to the courtesy or lack thereof of the police: when one sees himself as the privileged servant of a group so privileged they are not only above law but able to dictate it, this type of thing is inevitable.

KEEP OFF THE GRASS

By W. A. Leavell

The term "credibility gap" is becoming popular again throughout the country. This term is a way of saying the people think their leaders are telling them lies.

It seems to have started or become popular during the Johnson half of his first full term as President the polls found out that about 65 percent of the people felt they were not getting all the facts they should know about the Vietnam War.

From that point on it seemed like the people just didn't believe their President, his staff, the Congress and just about any official.

Well the "credibility gap" is back and it is even more than when President Johnson was in the White House. One of the major polls tells us that only about 17 per cent of the people believe President Nixon when he tells (over and over) that we will have "peace in the next generation" if we leave South Vietnam in what he calls the "right way."

Only about one person in five feels the two major conditions set by President Nixon for the withdrawal of all our forces from Vietnam—that South Vietnam be strong enough to protect itself and our prisoners of war be freed—have any chance of being a fact before the end of 1972.

Only about one person in five believes the Administration's story about the war is going. They don't believe the casualty rates (either ours or the enemy's.) They don't even believe the U.S. troop withdrawal figures.

President Nixon's "credibility gap" is even higher than President Johnson's. Today, about 67 per cent of the American people feel President Nixon and his helpers are not telling them all they need to know about the Vietnam War.

The hard fact is that the people seem to be saying that their government just doesn't have the truth in it anymore. They didn't believe the first Democratic Administration and they don't believe the present Republican Administration. They just don't believe their government no matter who is running it.

Think that is a little hard? Let's take a look at what is happening to political party lines in the country. In the face of the 1972 elections, political party lines seem to be disintegrating at a rapid rate. Faster than ever before.

A recent poll shows that of the likely voters next year, 23 per cent consider themselves neither Republicans nor Democrats. Of the likely voters next year 47 per cent consider themselves Democrats, 30 per cent call themselves Republicans and 23 per cent feel like independents. That is quite an increase over the voters who followed the regular party lines in 1968.

In the South the number of independents is 24 per cent. Among the under 30 voters in the South it is up to 38 per cent and the college educated in Dixie say there are 31 per cent independent.

No doubt the increase in independent voters is due to the fact that we have not had many leaders from that party. If we had an independent in the White House and found that he didn't know what the truth was all about, then that party would no doubt suffer the same fallout that the Democrats and Republicans have.

This disbelief in our leaders makes one wonder. Is it that liars become elected officials or do truth tellers become elected and the office make them tell stories?

When you look at the platforms many of our elected flock runs on and then look at their record in office, you can see that they are far from honest. It would seem that in order to get elected they have to say and claim things they know they are not going to do. They promise things they have no idea of doing.

Since anyone who promises something and doesn't do it is considered a story teller, it looks like many of our flock are bad guys.

Why don't our elected leaders tell us the truth? No doubt they feel that the truth would keep them from being reelected. It could be that they think the people are better off not knowing how bad things are. No matter what the reason, the people should have the truth from their government.

Until our government starts telling the people the truth, we just might have a lot of one term elected officials. What a switch that would be to have honesty one of the conditions of being reelected. How nice that would be.

Council Acted

Before Readers

It probably was the quick action of City Council and the General Assembly that put the muffler on last week's question. Officials worked so quickly that people in Bayside just knew that everything was being done that could be done.

What we're saying is, the response was practically nil. And we thought it would be quite an explosive issue!

This was the question: "Should City Council appeal the Federal Court's decision to place Bayside Borough in the Norfolk district on State Senate and House of Delegates elections?"

This was such a drastic revision to the General Assembly's plan and affected Virginia Beach so seriously, that it seemed logical the readers would get involved, so to speak.

But they didn't. There were only a handful of answers...all of them in favor, we might add. The best response was to the previous week's question: "Do the schools have a responsibility in providing the communities with recreational facilities, such as tennis courts, gymnasiums, even the classrooms and playgrounds used by the City Recreation Department?"

The response to this continued to be primarily "no" for the same reasons stated last week. One reader, however, disagreed: "I think the school properties are the best possible areas for recreational facilities. It should be possible to adjust departmental budgets to take care of these extra expenses. Surely the School Board and Recreation Department can work something out!"

When the Virginia Beach Borough Land Use Plan was introduced, it strongly favored making Atlantic and Pacific avenues one-way to alleviate the traffic congestion in the resort. It has never been enforced because many residents objected.

In light of the congestion this summer, might it possibly be the answer?

SUN SURVEY

QUESTION: Do you think Atlantic and Pacific avenues should each be made one-way thorough-fares through the resort?

Your comments and signed letters would be appreciated also.

Art Show's Well Organized

On The Cool Patio

Mrs. Louise Strole, workbook in hand, finds the outdoor patio just the right setting for firming up details of the Boardwalk Art Show.

By HELEN CRIST

It requires organizational ability to tackle the chairmanship of the Boardwalk Art Show. Too, it takes an abundance of energy, a calmness of disposition, the ability to cope with a crisis, firmness in dealing with temperament and the know-how of people-communication.

And in this, her second year in the role, Mrs. J.L. (Louise) Strole, Jr., has the chairmanship well in hand.

"The second time it gets easier," Louise says. "You find ways of refinement, to do things differently, to improve."

Though she maintains that she herself is only a dabbler in painting, she did study art at the University of Tampa. But she loves it, and would like nothing better than to have the expertise of the great painter.

"But this job of show chairmanship couldn't be handled by a producing artist," she says, "there wouldn't be time left to paint."

A striking woman, tall, reddish-blond hair cropped short, she has a model's stance.

She was, in fact, a professional model at Talheimer's in Richmond during earlier years. She's modeled here for Ames and Brownley, and for countless women's club activities as well.

"Clothes are exciting nowadays. You wear what you want and anything goes. Lines are good. You can buy expensive material, get a good Vogue pattern and make a dress that defies the homemade look."

On the 17th, when Harry and Sue Price have an evening party for the judges and prize winners of the art show, Louise will wear a purple polished cotton slit skirt with shocking pink top, set off by strings of neck pearls. And underneath that skirt will be a 100-year-old petticoat, once worn by her husband's grandmother.

"That party at the Price's incidentally," Louise said, "is by card invitation only, this year." Some years ago, Louise was executive secretary to the president of the Medical College of Virginia. This no doubt, gave her a solid foundation for acquiring people understanding, an asset as chairman of the Art Show.

And happily, she possesses, too, that valuable and sometimes rare quality, the ability to relax. Golf's her game, at the Princess Anne Country Club. We envisioned her a low-handicapper.

"Oh no, not at all," she said. "Actually I'm very erratic. But I think golf's just an excuse for me to get out there in the open. It's just beautiful, and I'm a nature lover anyway."

The score, in other words is not the thing with her. And therein lies the difference between golf as a therapeutic tranquilizer versus a thing to produce knots and nerves when the putt is missed or the alic places the exasperating little ball behind a tree in the rough.

In short, golf for her, is a relaxer.

These things we discussed on her outdoor patio at 68th Street where she lives with her husband, Jack, and her son, Steve Mundy. Steve's just chalked up three years with the Army. Now back from Okinawa and discharged from the service, he's enjoying some well earned leisure.

The Strole's daughter, Mrs. B.Y. Porter, lives nearby, affording her parents the wonderful opportunity to visit often with their grandchildren, Catherine and Elizabeth. And while Louise is clearly attuned to the outdoors, she's given many hours to charitable participation with local clubs.

A past president of the now extinct Oceanside Circle of The King's Daughters, she was chairman of the Coquina Ball for two years. She's presently treasurer of the Women of Galilee Episcopal Church.

What, we asked Mrs. Strole, are the new innovations of the Art Show this year?

"Rest rooms," she said. "This is the first year we'll have portable rest rooms. But they'll only serve the artists and families, and they'll be located on the van streets only."

Wouldn't it help, we wondered, if rest rooms were available for everyone attending the show, and for the flocks of people in general who enjoy the Beach throughout the year?

This brought a firm statement from Louise. "Yes," she said. "It's about time that the City of Virginia Beach realizes how valuable tourism is here. Ft. Lauderdale, for instance, has the most up to date modern facilities so do most other resort cities."

And noting the benefit to the city of the thousands of visitors who come to see the show they buy gas, eat lunch, spend money and it all filters back to the merchants, then into taxes and back to the city."

Elegance In Simplicity

An expert seamstress, Mrs. Strole selects this purple slit skirt, with shocking pink top for the Arts Center evening party honoring judges, and prize winners.

How to keep cool and save money

If you own an air conditioner, VEPCO advises that you do the following for maximum economy:

1. Don't overcool. Raise your setting to 76 to 78 degrees as recommended by most air conditioning specialists.
2. Have your central cooling unit serviced each year.
3. Keep filters clean.
4. Trim shrubbery from outside unit.
5. Put window unit in best location - in the middle of the area to be cooled.
6. Turn your air conditioner control up 5 degrees when you go to work.
7. Don't try to cool the great outdoors - keep windows closed.

Beach teacher appointed

Dr. Woodrow W. Wilkerson, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, announced today that Mrs. Lottie Waters, currently social studies team leader at Plaza Junior High School, has been appointed to serve on the Curriculum Study Committee For Social Studies, Kindergarten Through Grade Twelve.

Dr. Wilkerson stated that "Mrs. Waters was selected because of her interest and contributions to social studies education in Virginia."

Mrs. Waters has served as team leader at Plaza Junior High School since it opened in the fall of 1969. The School Board appointed Mrs. Waters at its June meeting to the new position of assistant principal for instruction at Princess Anne High School for the 1971-1972 school term.

Happiness is. . . a pair of glasses

New Jersey 07078. Thousands of packages from all over the United States arrive in the next stucco headquarters every year. There, volunteers, mostly housewives, sort out the glasses, separating those in plastic frames from those in metal frames.

Many of the 250 workers have learned to operate complex optical grading and testing equipment. They help fill specific orders from missions and hospitals in foreign countries where plastic framed glasses and sunglasses are sent.

The metal framed glasses have their uses, too. Through refining, they yield precious metals that are sold, along with the jewelry, to finance New Eyes funds in over 100 hospitals and health agencies throughout the United States. The money in these funds buys glasses for people who have nowhere else to turn.

In addition to these funds, arrangements have also been made in 48 states through health and welfare agencies whereby New Eyes purchases glasses for carefully screened persons, to whom no other private or public funds are available.

Last year 1,000 people were helped under this program. Tommy was one of them.

But, as public response has grown throughout the years, so has the volume of requests. Therefore, New Eyes needs more discarded jewelry and eyeglasses to do its job. As one New Eyes volunteer put it: "The wonderful thing about New Eyes is that we can ask people to send us things they no longer need."

And these gifts can bring vision to a little boy, like Tommy.

Boardwalk Art Show Runs July 15-19

The Boardwalk Art Show, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center, runs July 15-19. Show time daily is from 1 to 5 p.m.

Turn back the clock and take a look at a letter that precipitated the event that mushroomed from a one-table-one umbrella affair with 104 artists showing, to the present 71 expectations of 500 artists hoping to top the 1968 sales of $84,000.

The letter is dated May 14, 1966. It was written by Alice Granberry Parker, one of the instigators of the event, along with Mrs. Florence Turner and Mrs. Carol Doyle. It reads:

"Dear Member:

Let's latch on to a little culture in our 'City by the Sea.'"

Cooperate with your Art Association by sending the enclosed invitation to our first annual Boardwalk Art Show to all of the artists you may know, anywhere in the country.

If you have any free time, please volunteer your services to Mr. Ernest Stone, chairman of the Art Show."

Mrs. Turner said the comment they received from most people was, "What! That's an absurd idea!"

But after the show was held and $2,783 in sales had been made, there was a change of heart.

As Kenneth Harris, noted painter, said, "It was certainly not a pink tea affair."

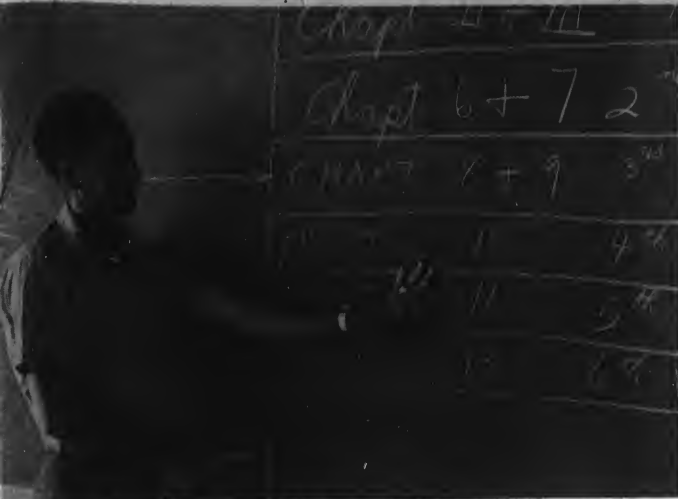

The Virginian-Pilot, on July 16, 1966 wrote: "Police officer C. J. Spelce, standing desperately at the corner of 24th and Atlantic Ave. said, 'We've never had a traffic jam at Virginia Beach before.'"

Mike Henegan the late proprietor of the B & M Restaurant, said, "It was the best weekend we've ever had. The best thing that ever happened to the Beach."

The newly created Arts Center, formerly the Art Association, thinks so too.

One-Room Schoolhouse Theory Revived

Teacher Shade Griffin sets up the schedule.

Hot weather's no barrier to concentration for the willing math students and teachers.

How do high school math instructors spend their summers?

If they're anything like Shade W. Griffin, they work. Griffin's a math instructor at Virginia Beach High School and a retired Navy commander.

This summer he's instigated a program of tutoring for students that brings him back every morning from 10 to 11 a.m. to the high school.

He's doing this in conjunction with a project course at Old Dominion University where he's working toward a master's degree.

It was necessary to secure volunteer teachers for the math tutoring program. Instruction is on a one-to-one basis.

The volunteers came forth from his ninth grade math class at the high school. They are: Paula Baldwin, Laura Oaksmith, Mike Devine, Paul Young, Bob Linsley, Cary Schwartz, Robin Ailstock, John Acela, Lisa Norris, Joanne McKnight, Nancy Holland and Beth Coffin.

Students are fifth graders from Cooke Elementary School.

The six-week program is at the halfway mark. Teachers give tests at their choosing, or not at all. At the end of the period they will be tested to gauge progress.

A glance into the classroom this week revealed young teachers so earnestly instructing their charges that they scarcely looked up as a camera recorded pictures.

And the students aren't necessarily those who score low in math in regular class. Some B students are striving for A's.

"This is beneficial all around," Griffin said. "Teachers learn too, while they're instructing the others."

There's no pressure applied, it's a voluntary process on all sides.

"And it goes right back to the little one-room schoolhouse," Griffin noted, "where several grades were taught in the same room and they all learned from listening to each other."

He added that it would seem feasible to continue a program such as this throughout the school year. "We might use it during study hall, letting the older students teach the younger."

IN-SIGHT

A little helping hand from the boss goes to student Ricky Palette and teacher Mike Dwine.

Cooke student Mary Cherry is picking up some valuable pointers from Paula Baldwin.

Lauren Hudgins is hoping that Edgar Suggs will rate an A next year.

Robin Atkinson, visiting Cary Schwartz, went right along to class while Cary instructs Debbie Lehmann.

Bob Linsley will probably get out the surf board and head for the ocean later, but right now he's concerned with helping Bettie Dunn pull that math grade up.

A Bike Hike For Health And Happiness

Gail Hood, one of the organizers of Sunday's bike hike, was giving riders instructions through a police loudspeaker. "And for those of you who can't hack it, there'll be a truck following along behind you to pick you up."

More than 200 bike riders gathered at the corner of 21st and Pacific for a 30-mile round-trip to Sandbridge "to promote physical fitness and ecology." There $2 entry fee was earmarked for the Parks and Recreation Department.

The bike hike, the brainchild of Nabil Kassir, a Virginia Beach businessman brought cyclists of all descriptions. Probably the youngest was seven-month-old Sonja Armbruster who sucked on a pacifier as she sat on the rear of her daddy's bike.

Kassir, owner of Peabody's Warehouse, a teshirt outlet, cycled his way through Europe and organized the bike hike to show the physical fitness and ecological advantages of bicycles. "Good exercise, no pollution, no traffic, no noise," Mrs. Hood said.

GETTING THE RIGHT OF WAY - Police Sgt. E. L. Jackson stops traffic on Pacific Ave. so more than 200 bike riders could get underway on their trip to Sandbridge.

JUST ALONG FOR THE RIDE - Seven-month-old Sonja Armbruster was more interested in her pacifier than Sunday's bike hike to Sandbridge.

"FOR THOSE OF YOU WHO CAN'T HACK IT" - Gail Hood gives instructions to the bike riders through a police loudspeaker. A truck followed the group to pick up weary cyclists who felt they couldn't hack it.

Army Band Due For Lotus Festival

The 384th Army Band of Ft. Eustis will give a concert July 22 at 8 p.m. at 23rd and Oceanfront during Lotus Festival Week. The band, directed by Chief Warrant Officer Leon R. Wyatt of San Francisco, is composed of 45 musicians, many of whom have attended the Naval School of Music at Little Creek. The band is equally versatile in performing concert and stage band music.

Oceana Swim Meet Set July 25

Get in the swim with the Oceana Otters.

They're 20 youngsters, around the ages of 8 to 15, dependents of enlisted men and officers both active and retired, who swim on the AAU sanctioned team. They're sponsored by Oceana NAS.

On July 25, at Oceana, they'll hold their annual B Developmental Meet at the Special Services pool. Some 300 swimmers from the state are expected to compete. Awards will be given poolside.

And the Otters are recruiting. Their summer schedule goes from 7:30 to 9 a.m. Tuesday through Friday at the Oceana pool. In the winter they swim one night a week and Saturday a.m. at NAS Norfolk pool.

OCEANA OTTERS

Cmdr. Art Fusco is president of the swim club. Bill Wagner and Dawn Lyon are on the executive committee. For further information, contact Cmdr. Fusco, 340-0830.

Woody Convicted Of Jones' Murder

BY LES LEHIGH

Robert Lee Woody has been convicted of second degree murder in the death of Samuel W. Jones, Sr., by a Circuit Court jury which fixed his punishment at eight years in prison.

Woody, 33, was charged, along with Fayette Tillman, Jr., 38, both of Norfolk with murder shortly after the bodies of Jones and his 48-year-old wife, Jane, were found tied together floating a short distance off the Little Creek Jetty last September 8.

Testimony during Woody's trial indicated the couple was bound and strangled to death, tied together, lashed to a small boat anchor, and thrown overboard last Labor Day weekend when they took two prospective buyers for their 30-foot three-hulled trimaran for a trip on the craft into Chesapeake Bay. Woody and Tillman were identified in court as these "prospective buyers".

The seven man five woman jury returned their verdict last Thursday night at 7:32 p.m. after deliberating the trial's four days of testimony for approximately seven hours.

The jury received the case at 10:15 a.m. and remained closed behind closed doors until reaching their verdict, with the exception of an hour lunch period and two brief periods devoted to clarifying legal points with Judge Robert S. Wahab, Jr.

Their deliberation was marked at times by "heated" verbal exchanges which were partially audible through the door of the room in which they were confined.

At 1:05 p.m. the jury, through their foreman S. G. Mitchell, asked Wahab if Tillman could be incriminated through their consideration of a statement which he purportedly signed exonerating Woody of any blame in Jones' death.

This statement was reportedly written by Woody on Tillman's instructions while they were both confined to City Jail awaiting trial. It was used, along with a 44 page typed statement which Woody gave police shortly after his arrest placing the blame on Tillman for Jones killing, to attempt to clear Woody of any blame for Jones death.

Judge Wahab instructed the jury they should not concern themselves with Tillman in their deliberation of the trial of Woody.

At 7:12 p.m. Wahab again summoned the jury to the courtroom to inquire on their progress and was informed by foreman Mitchell they appeared to be "deadlocked".

Wahab reminded the jury that their verdict must be unanimous. He also instructed them that while it was highly improbable that each juror "had the same view at the outset of deliberations it is the duty of each juror to discuss the views of other jurors" to reach a unanimous verdict. Wahab pointed out however this move should not be taken "at the sacrifice of any juror's conscientious convictions".

The jury returned at 7:32 p.m. with its verdict of Woody's guilt of second degree murder with punishment fixed at eight years.

Defense attorney Stanley E. Sachs requested Judge Wahab set the verdict aside on grounds of being contrary to law and evidence, and that sufficient evidence had not been presented to support Woody's conviction.

Wahab agreed he would hear arguments on Sachs' motion at a later date and instructed Sach and Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans to compile their arguments on the motion.

When the guilty verdict was returned Woody slumped over supporting his head with his right hand looking at the floor. He remained in this position, and sobbed quietly, while his attorney entered the motion to set aside the verdict.

Woody was remanded by Judge Wahab to custody of the city jail pending further legal proceedings.

Tillman is scheduled to enter Circuit Court on Wednesday, Aug. 4.

Police have filed no charges thus far in connection with the murder of Mrs. Jones.

Needles and syringes of this type are now under controlled sales by legislation enacted by the Virginia General Assembly.

New Law to Curb Growing Drug Abuse

BY LES LEHIGH

New legislation designed to assist law enforcement agencies in curbing illegal drug trafficking was recently passed in the special General Assembly.

The law requires the maintaining of records of persons who purchase hypodermic needles and/or syringes from any drug outlet.

While such items are commonly used by a large number of persons for medicinal purposes, such as diabetics taking insulin injections, they have also recently received an increased usage from individuals turning to illegal use of drugs.

Basically the law requires pharmacists to record the name and address of the person making the purchase, the quantity of items purchased, the date of purchase, intended use of the material, total cost of the items, and initial the record as witness to the sale.

The law also requires those individuals making such purchases to "furnish written legitimate purposes for which such item, device or substance is being purchased."

The law further states that such material shall not be "sold or distributed to persons under the age of 16 years except by a physician for legitimate purposes or upon his prescription."

Such records must, under the new law, be made available for inspection upon request of any law-enforcement officer or agent of the State Board of Pharmacists.

Violations of any of the above regulations would make the offender subject to arrest and court proceedings.

When questioned as to the value of the new law in curbing drug abuse Capt. R. C. Davis, Police Detective Division C.O., viewed the new law as "anything in this line will help."

He added "It's not as good as I would like it to be, but at least it cuts down on possession or abuse. I might add at this point," Davis continued, "this state law gives us the right to check records in regards to only the new law."

He clarified this point by saying "Many people aren't aware of the fact that the '70 session of the General Assembly stripped police officers of rights to check other records of drug sales which, to me, was discouraging. Up to that time we were authorized to check records of drug stores to determine who was obtaining drugs such as paragon and others who were 'free wheeling' with prescriptions in the medical profession. But for some reason everyone seemed to be so concerned with the drug problem we can no longer do this."

"It would seem that whoever drafted the '70 Drug specified Act that only the Board of Pharmacists could view these records, and I question their logic in doing so in that the local law enforcement agency is charged with the control of illegal drug use and abuse."

Davis concluded by saying, "If the Board of Pharmacists had several hundred agents to completely take over the police activities in narcotics work perhaps stripping us of this authority would make sense."

What you can do during the strike to speed up service.

As you probably know, some telephone workers are now on strike. We appreciate your patience and regret any inconvenience the present work stoppage may cause you. During the strike, we will be working around-the-clock to maintain reliable telephone service.

Here's what you can do to speed up service:

- 1. Dial all long distance calls direct. It's not only faster, but on out-of-state calls, it's cheaper, too. See your phone book for area codes and instructions.
- 2. Use your phone book. Most local numbers you need are in the telephone directory. Looking them up yourself will save time for everyone.

We hope to restore everything to full service as soon as possible. Thanks for helping out.

Gonzalez displays his "fence board graffiti" which became the center of controversy during the Boardwalk Art Show.

Art Show Display Declared Obscene

Nick Larry Gonzalez of Norfolk has earned the dubious honor of being the first artist to be arrested through displaying an example of his talents during the annual Virginia Beach Boardwalk Art Show.

Gonzalez, 26, of Oorpa Avenue, was arrested at 11th Street and oceanfront last Friday afternoon following complaints over the contents of his rendition of "fence-board graffiti".

He was charged under a portion of the State Code which refers to the possession, public display, and/or attempt to sell material which is considered to be obscene.

Gonzalez said his difficulties began last Thursday shortly after judges had marked his exhibit, consisting of several paintings and other works of art, with a marker which indicated "one painting in this exhibit has been selected for judging". This meant that Gonzalez had been given the opportunity to compete with other artists for top honors in the Boardwalk Art Show.

Shortly thereafter, according to Gonzalez, he was informed numerous complaints had been received concerning the language which appeared in his work. He said the painting was removed from the Boardwalk and taken to the 13th Street Art Show office where it remained until Friday morning, at which time it was again placed on public display.

Mrs. Louise Strole, art show general chairman, was joined by police Friday morning in urging Gonzalez to remove the painting from public display or face possible arrest.

Gonzalez indicated he had been informed by show judges that the painting was not obscene, however he was informed by Mrs. Strole that the City Attorney informed her and police that he had viewed the painting and it had been declared obscene.

Gonzalez said he "felt I couldn't remove it (the painting) because of his personal convictions" and he was arrested and taken, along with his works of art, to the 2nd Police Precinct. He was released within a short time after the posting of a $200 bond, raised through the assistance of friends. He is scheduled to enter Municipal Court on the charges on Friday, July 30.

Saturday authorities indicated Gonzalez returned to his assigned area of the Boardwalk to display his art work. The controversial painting was among items on display, however the offensive words had been blocked out.

Final Plan Starts

The city's seventh and final land use plan will probably be larger in land area than all other plans put together.

The Princess Anne plan will encompass 150 square miles and involve 15,562 residents. This number is expected to jump, however, to over 20,000 by 1985.

"Tomy way of thinking, this is the most important plan to date," commented urban planner Lee Hickman.

"The main thing is to determine what we want to happen down in that area of the city," he added. "This is going to be a very interesting study."

Work is already underway on the plan and several preliminary studies have been completed, such as agricultural suitability, transportation, soils and other pertinent data.

This plan will be compiled just as the Bayside and Little Neck-Lynhaven plans have been done...with the assistance of a citizens advisory committee.

Hickman said that a trouble spot has already developed. Very few people turned out last week for the first discussion between planners and citizens. It is usually from these early meetings that a group of about 20 civic representatives is formed to work with the Planning Department.

In the area encompassed by this plan, however, there are very few civic leagues and apparently too few residents learned of the first meeting.

"I certainly didn't know about it," said Mrs. Reva McClannan, wife of House of Delegate candidate Glenn McClannan and an active civic leader. "I would have been at that first meeting. This is a very important plan."

Hickman said that rather than invite participants or representatives, he hoped the people involved would contact the Planning Department and leave their names so that a citizens group could be formed. "The Princess Anne plan is not only important because of its size, but because within its boundaries are some of the city's most undeveloped areas. There are also a few critical areas such as False Cape, Sandbridge, Oceana, the Court

City Ordinances

Writing Them's One Thing, Enforcing Something Else!

By LES LEHIGH

"A police officer on the street, every time he gets ready to make an arrest, can't determine the constitutionality of ordinances. We have our opinions but would be second guessing the courts."

This statement was made by Police Chief Col. W.W. Davis in the wake of a court decision which struck down the city's anti-litter law, the enforcement of which recently resulted in the arrest and conviction of several persons for distribution of a newspaper and religious material.

Circuit Court Judge Robert S. Wahab, Jr., has ruled the ordinance is contrary to the First Amendment, which guarantees freedom of the press and of speech and is therefore unconstitutional.

Judge Wahab issued the ruling during the appeal of two Navy men attached to Oceana Naval Air Station, Lawrence A. Gray, 23, and Stephen C. Jones, 20, who were convicted last April in Municipal Court under provisions of the ordinance. Each was fined $100 and given a suspended 10-day jail sentence. They had been arrested for distributing copies of an anti-war newspaper, "On the Beach", along Atlantic Avenue.

The Rev. George T. Stallings, pastor of First Colonial Baptist Church was also convicted in Municipal Court under provisions of the ordinance following his arrest for distribution of religiously oriented material along Atlantic Avenue. He indicated an appeal of the conviction.

The question of difficulties involved in the enforcement of such laws was discussed with Col. Favis.

Davis pointed out that while police officers do not play an active role in the preparation of approval of City ordinances they are charged with the responsibility of enforcing them.

Phone Call Ends In Rape

The search continues for a suspect in the reported rape of a 20-year-old girl outside her 28th Street residence last Saturday morning.

Police quote the victim with saying she entered a pay phone booth in front of her dwelling about 2 a.m. and while completing a call observed an unknown man acting in a suspicious nature as he passed the booth.

Upon completing her phone call she no longer observed anyone in the vicinity of the booth and proceeded to enter her residence.

She stated her assailant suddenly appeared and grabbed her, dragging her to a secluded spot adjacent to the structure and sexually assaulted her.

School Board Rejects Consolidation Idea

By HELEN CRIST

"Spencer L. Lott, Beach School Board member, Tuesday's annual reorganization meeting, read a statement opposing consolidation of public school districts in Norfolk and the Beach. It was unanimously accepted by the Board and read into the minutes.

The statement read: "The matter of consolidation of schools recently discussed in the papers is most disturbing to me. While I have been unable to support the trend of shifting children away from their neighborhood schools, I have felt that this was a matter for the local communities to resolve.

Tent Replaced

In a recent storm, the Tent-Tabernacle now at First Colonial Road, across from VEPCO, was damaged. The tent has been replaced, and revival services will continue as scheduled.

"Now the amalgamation of city and county schools and/or the proposal of intercity schools presents a threat to the American school system as we have known it.

"I feel that this Board should go on record as being unalterably opposed to intercity schools whether it be accomplished by the state

Trevino Will Play Red Wing Golf Course

Lee Trevino, golf's brightest superstar, has been signed to conduct a clinic and to play in an 18-hole exhibition match on September 7, at Virginia Beach's new Red Wing Lake Golf Course.

Frank L. Creasy, City Public Information Officer, made the announcement at the Virginia Beach Sports Club's Tuesday luncheon meeting.

Creasy said negotiations for Trevino's appearance in Virginia Beach began in June, when Trevino was engaged in the United States Open tournament. While not disclosing what Trevino's fee for his one-day appearance would be, Creasy indicated that it was high.

One of the players in the four-man exhibition match with Trevino will be Vinny Giles, of Richmond, who this year won the Virginia Amateur Championship for a record sixth time.

Giles, 27, was an All-American golfer during collegiate days at

Motherhood Waits

When Howard Swindle, the young Navy man who moonlights as the Virginia Beach Sun's week-end assignment reporter, has a deadline to meet, nothing's going to stop him.

Not even parenthood. Last Saturday it became apparent that Howard and his wife, Janie, would be parents before too many hours passed. Janie had made a trip to the hospital early that morning but was sent home to wait a bit longer.

Mid-afternoon Howard had an assignment at London Bridge.

Most fathers-to-be would have cancelled the appointment and fallen apart at the seams, or something.

Not Howard. He simply put Janie in the car, suitcase and all, went on to fulfill his obligation, THEN took Janie to the hospital.

Everything turned out fine. Howard met his deadline. And so did Janie. Little Ashley Camille Swindle weighed in at six pounds and four ounces.

"Boy, she's one cute baby," bragged her happy father, on his way to his next assignment!

Virginia Beach General Hospital celebrated its sixth anniversary last week by recognizing employees for their loyal service. Gordon Stephenson, hospital board chair-

Final Plan Starts

Revisions will be made, based on these recommendations, and it will receive a public briefing. It may possibly receive two public briefings, and about three or four modifications before it finally goes to the Planning Commission, then on to City Council.

The plans are used as guidelines in developing areas of the city. Once this plan is complete it will clear the way for final drafting of the city's long-awaited zoning ordinance.

The Bayside plan was approved last week by the Planning Commission. The Little Neck-Lynnhaven plan received its first public briefing Monday night.

Navy Seaman Apprentice James R. Suddeth, son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Suddeth of 5755 W. Hastings Arch, Virginia Beach, Va., was graduated from recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

He is a 1969 graduate of Bayside High School in Virginia Beach.

Along with the original plan, the staff will compile two alternate plans.

The first draft will be presented to the various city departments, the Planning Department staff and the working committee. Each group will make its own recommendations.

Why The Replacement?

City Council made a rather surprising move last week when it voted to replace Planning Director Charles Carrington with a businessman as one of the city's representatives on the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission.

This move leaves Virginia Beach without the vote of a professional planner.

The merit of this action is obscure, to say the least. It would seem vital to the best interest of this growing city to have a professional urban planner as a voting member on this influential body.

Certainly no one can quarrel with the selection of Algy Cohen as Mr. Carrington's replacement. He is one of the finest, most community-minded businessmen in the city. His contributions to the development of Virginia Beach are exceptional and primarily unrecognized since he usually shuns the spotlight.

So the criticism is not of the selection but of the decision to seek a replacement for Mr. Carrington. It was a surprising, and quite possibly an unwise, move.

Councilman Reid Ervin was the only member of council who questioned the judgement of Bayside's Dr. Clarence Holland in making the motion. He pointed out that he thought it imperative that Virginia Beach have the benefit of a voting professional planner on the commission.

What was even more surprising was that not one member of council supported him in opposing the motion. Even though they have seen Mr. Carrington stand firm and fight for what he believed best for the city—such as the sign ordinance incident when he told council that as a professional planner he could not, and his staff would not, support the ordinance as revised by the Planning Commission.

The entire matter is baffling. It raises many questions. It especially causes one to question council's judgement, if not its motives.

City's Responsibility

This city is faced with one of those expensive, many-sided problems that eventually hit all oceanfront resort municipalities. Whether to continue the city's development of the oceanfront or leave it up to private interests.

At least three motels are already planned at the south end of the beach, near Rudee Inlet. All three sites must, of course, be bulkheaded. So who bears the cost? The city, by continuing the boardwalk to that point, or the individual motel owners, by private bulkheading?

No one can deny that the new motels would generate considerable revenue for the entire city. But that isn't really the issue. The real point is who honestly is morally obligated to foot this particular expense.

It would seem the city is, after building the boardwalk for most of the commercial district, it hardly seems fair to now expect the few remaining property owners to provide their own bulkheading. Also, if private interests take over this responsibility, the city loses control over the uniformity of oceanfront development.

The Virginia Beach boardwalk has become one of the resort's most valued attractions. It is one of the finest on the East Coast and serves many purposes other than that for which it was created. It was inevitable that the city would eventually face the day when the boardwalk had to be extended to Rudee Inlet, or thereabouts. That day is finally here.

With the new city budget still wet behind the ears, this added expense will knock its balance completely out of kilter. And with the many services this city needs to provide its citizens, this construction will be quite an extravagance.

But uniformity of oceanfront development and moral obligation are the factors which point the financial finger at the City of Virginia Beach. And the investment will, after all, reap many benefits in years to come.

Permits Possible

It was just a matter of time until one of the House of Delegates candidates spoke out on the Back Bay conflict. And it was businessman Glenn Holloman who took the bull by the horns and said he was opposed to closing the beach.

The struggle of some groups to keep the beach open to vehicular traffic, despite the Department of Interior's announced decision to close it next year, coupled with the number of groups supporting the closure, promises to be one of the city's loudest battles.

Into this fray stepped Glenn Holloman, a knight in shining armor to the Virginia Beach Bugle Association, of which he reportedly is a member, and the Committee of Concerned Citizens for Conservation and Recreation; black knight to the four groups seeking closure of the beach: Conservation Council of Virginia, Inc., Tidewater Citizens Against Pollution, the Environmental Conservation Organization of Students (ECOS) at Old Dominion University and the Cape Henry Bird Club.

It was brave, at least politically, for this candidate to take such a controversial stand, but it was rather thoughtless to chastise ECOS for its efforts in ecology and conservation. This group is far from a "small group of students who claim to be ecologists". It has a large membership of devoted young people. They step on toes occasionally, that's true, and City Council has faced them down more than once. But it is doubtful that even City Council has ever questioned the members' sincerity and genuine interest in preserving the ecological balance of this area.

There are many, many people already drawn up in this controversy and it will surely grow in interest before implementation of the closure next year. There is merit on each side, of course. It does seem a shame to close the beach to all traffic because of the thoughtless destruction caused by those week-end joy-riders who violate the rules.

The beach that stretches south beyond the Wildlife Refuge is a gift to nature lovers, to those who know how to preserve the wonders of this gift. But it will no longer be accessible to those who might enjoy it as it should be enjoyed if Back Bay is closed.

The Department of the Interior has already decided to issue special permits to owners of property beyond the refuge. A similar arrangement might be considered for responsible nature lovers, perhaps a license of sorts, if they are carefully issued and the rules strictly supervised. If this arrangement then failed, the beach should definitely be closed.

Good Habit

The Boardwalk Art Show which ended Monday was the most financially successful one to date but it was anything but smooth sailing for the show officials. Or for the artists. And all of the problems were not caused by the two fierce thunderstorms that ripped through the displays, damaging a number of the works.

One young artist was arrested after the city attorney declared his painting obscene. The language painted on the "fence" was offensive, admittedly, even though it was used quite casually in a recent award-winning movie. But if these taboos are to be imposed they should not be left up to the judgement of the artists. The creative mind is not necessarily the most sensible when it comes to self-expression. These taboos should be spelled out in some manner to prevent recurrences of this incident.

And more than one artist reported difficulties with motel personnel. They were refused use of motel facilities. They were threatened with arrest for attempting to use motel parking lots to load paintings. Several artists were treated so rudely they said they would not return to Virginia Beach. This is a poor image to create.

The motel personnel had a legitimate right to do the things they did. That's true. But for four days out of the year a little tolerance, a little kindness, a little consideration would be far more beneficial to the city. And to the individual motel owners. In fact, the practice might become a habit.

NATURE: USE-ENJOY-CONSERVE

YOUR LAND IS MY LAND

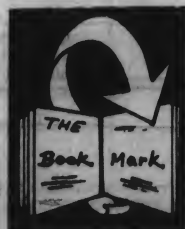

Congressmen will soon match forensic talents in a contest to settle the biggest land scramble since the settling of the West.

The conflict was sparked by the $7 million report of the Public Land Review Commission and the policies it lays down for the use of public lands.

With more than 1/3 of the U.S. land area at stake, conservationists vs. multi-use advocates will unleash their rhetoric.

In the final analysis, however, the problem is reduced to who will tell whom how to use these great natural resources.

We feel that the multiple-use advocates have the best of the argument, for in this way the land will be used constructively for the many instead of a select few.

BLUESCHILD BABY is a first personal novel about a young man, George Cain, just returning to the streets of New York after prison. He had always seemed destined for success; he was the basketball star, the scholarship student. What happened to him?

The reader gets a panoramic view of life in the streets as George searches for junk and friends. As he sinks lower into the degrading world of overdoses, knifing, stealing and rape, he begins to look at his past. His parents offered him every chance. He has learned to hate his white mistress and he barely knows his half breed child; he is living in a world of the dead. But what causes the atmosphere of tension that is ready to erupt at any second? The bitterness of the blacks is growing and Newark, New Jersey explodes in rioting.

As George searches for a reason to live, he meets his childhood sweetheart, Nandy. Nandy gives him the reason to pull himself up, reason to kick the habit. With her help during his period of delirium, he realizes why his life and the lives of so many others have taken the suicide path of drugs.

BLUESCHILD BABY is not for someone who looks at life through rosey glasses; it is an ugly, shocking, and often sickening picture of a way of life. The book ends on a note of hope for one, but death for many others.

KEEP OFF THE GRASS

By W. A. Leavell

In 1908, C. Northcote Parkinson, from England, announced what is known today throughout the world as "PARKINSON'S LAW". This irrefutable law says: "CIVIL SERVICE EXPANDS BY AN INEXORABLE RULE OF GROWTH, IRRESPECTIVE OF THE WORK (IF ANY) WHICH HAS TO BE DONE".

In other words, the number of people who work for the different branches of government increases no matter what work they do, if any. If you start a new department of government, on any level, it will do some work with one employee. It will do about the same amount of work with two and so on and so on.

Mr. Parkinson stated that each unit of government feeds on itself and not the job it is supposed to do. When you have enough work to justify a pencil you soon have to have a pencil corner, then a pencil buyer and then someone in charge of doing away with the used pencils. This means that you soon have three people involved in seeing that one person has the use of a pencil.

Parkinson's Law has been proved to be one of the few irrefutable rules of government bureaucracy. If any instance has ever occurred that even hints this law might not be 100 per cent correct, in all countries or at any level of government - federal, state, county, city, etc. - no one seems to be able to find it.

Two new alarming predictions based on Parkinson's Law have just come to light. If these two predictions prove to be true, we will lose our fight against Communism and pure socialism without ever having a war or anything like that. By the year 2049, 78 years from now, this country will be a pure socialist state.

Who says? How do they figure our country will end up like this? Will our elected leaders sell us down the river? Will the liberals lead us into such a state? Will the voters change their minds and vote us into such a condition?

Well, it seems that none other than the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., in New York, one of our major banks, has used Parkinson's Law to figure the rate of growth of our government workers and projected this to the future.

It seems that the Number of public employees in the United States has been growing at more than double the rate of the rise in the labor force. If this situation continues at its present rate and the other factors stay the same, in 78 years or by the year 2049, every member of the labor force in this country will be working for some branch of the government.

This will mean by feeding on itself, our bureaucracy will have to grow to include everyone that is able to work. At that time, no one would be left for private industry. In effect, when every one is working for the government that will be the end of our present system and a form of pure socialism.

Mr. Parkinson himself started this new prediction by taking a look at the growth of government workers in England recently. He found that if that country keeps up its present rate of increase in those who work for Big Brother, everyone in England will be working for the government by the year 2195. It seems that the increase in this country is faster than in England as we will reach the end of our road 146 years sooner.

Does this sound fanciful? Let's see. We have over 81,000 different government units in this country now. This is growing. One out of every six people in the work force now work for one of these government units. We now have more than 13,000,000 civilians on the government payroll.

In 1947, just after WW II, only one out of every 26 Americans worked for the government. Since 1947 our population has increased by about 30 per cent and those drawing public pay checks has gone up 135 per cent.

Last year was not one of our better business years and many companies cut their number of employees. What did Big Brother do? Last year our units of government throughout the country added about 385,000 jobs. Government is the fastest growing industry in the country today.

I can't help but wonder who the devil is going to pay for all this? If no one works for private industry, if we don't have any profits to tax, where will the money come from. Unless Big Brother had a money tree we don't know about, he better take a fresh look at these Parkinson's Law predictions. Somethings got to give.

One-Way Streets Are Controversial

Now we know why the City Planning Department's suggestion about the one-way streets in Virginia Beach Borough never really came to pass.

The citizens are so divided over the issue it would be pull and tug all the way.

The response was moderately light to last week's question: "Do you think Atlantic and Pacific avenues should each be made one-way thoroughfares through the resort?"

It wasn't so strong a response as we would have liked, but it wasn't the poorest we've seen either. And it was split right down the middle, 50-50. That's what's so surprising.

One reader was in favor of the one-way set-up, but only "May through September".

Another in favor said "If it would help Atlantic Avenue in the summer, I'm all for it."

And yet another commented: "It was recommended. Why wasn't it ever put into effect?"

Speaking out in opposition to the idea, one reader gave this as the reason: "I believe it would adversely affect the merchants and hotel/motel owners."

Another against it said: "Our street system is confusing enough as it is. Don't add to the motorists' problems."

So if the City Fathers expect the results of the Sun Survey column to give them any encouragement in starting the one-way arrangement, they are out of luck. Half the people will be happy. Half of them won't.

This week's question shouldn't be so complex. Norfolk Mayor Roy Martin made the comment last week that eventually the courts would probably consolidate the Tidewater school systems into one. This comment brought an instant reaction from Virginia Beach Mayor Donald Rhodes, as well as the Virginia Beach School Board. How do the citizens feel about such a consolidation?

Thirty-Two Years At The Cavalier

He's Mister Goodwill Ambassador Himself

The phone rings often for Wilson's services in the Hunt Room, where he's manager.

By Helen Crist

He's Mr. Goodwill ambassador himself, and one of The Cavalier's biggest assets, it's been said.

He's Carlos F. Wilson, and he's been part of The Cavalier picture for 32 years.

"Wilson?" they'll say at the Beach... "He's an institution here."

A jolly smiling man, Wilson was first employed at the hotel when he was 15, "but I sort of had to put that up a little to 16 to get the job," he says.

His initiation into the workaday world was via the kitchen and in the Cavalier formal gardens, which he describes as... "the prettiest thing I ever saw."

"We had flowers all year-round-why we had one girl who didn't do anything but arrange flowers every day for the dining room."

Those gardens were replaced some years ago with the parking lot. As for Wilson's early kitchen detail, it was a far cry from the mechanized slick operation of today.

"We didn't have any machines to do the work-washed the dishes, glasses, pans, everything by hand."

The elegant days of The Cavalier are still fresh in his mind. "We wore fancy uniforms and on Sunday, I remember I wore tails, hickory-striped trousers-all the waiters did."

And no one, of course, would think of simply dropping in on the hotel without a reservation.

"We'd have the same people back year after year," he recalls.

It was a whole new ball game when the Navy took over the hotel during World War II and converted it into a radar school.

Wilson, then, joined the war effort in a civilian capacity at the Norfolk Naval Base. It was his duty to transport the servicemen to the hotel daily for class.

"There were Navy people everywhere," he says. "The Cavalier garage was a commissary, the Hunt Room was a coffee room.

After the war, the Cavalier management asked him to return. He was delighted to do so.

Wilson's done just about everything workwise at The Cavalier-in the kitchen, the gardens, hall houseman, bellman, at the Beach and Cabana Club, and now he's manager of the Hunt Room.

Celebrities? He's known many. He's attended such personalities as the Dorsey Brothers, Benny Goodman, Harry Taylor and so many others.

His favorite? He throws back his head and laughs and says, "Guy Lombardo-yes sir! I used to think when he placed that music out there at the Beach Club that he was the greatest ever. That music did something to me. It sure did."

And the Cavalier guests took a liking to him. One, in particular, was the late Prime Minister of Canada, William Mackenzie King. He vacationed at the hotel for a month over a period of several years, and always requested that Wilson serve him.

"His table was number 80 in the dining room," Wilson says. "In the mornings I'd take up his breakfast to the room. I remember once he said to me 'Wilson what's that bird that sings outside my window every morning at the same time and every night?'"

"That's a blue bird," I'd tell him, and sure enough, it did every time he came to the hotel."

There would be times when the Prime Minister known as a champion of the rights of labor would just feel like talking and he'd call Wilson and they'd sit and chat philosophically for the longest time, he remembers.

Wilson isn't Southern born-he's a native of Camden, New Jersey. Came here when he was two.

Education? "There weren't any schools for us out in Kempville then," he says, "so we all went to school at the Kempville Baptist Church. Then I graduated from Union Kempville High School after it was built."

And Wilson is now chairman of the deacon's board and treasurer of the Baptist Church.

His mother, Cora W. Wilson, recently retired from the school system after some 40 years of teaching.

Married to Annie E. Wiggins, they've had two children: Mrs. Margie Coffield and the late Patricia Anne Spence. He has one granddaughter, Adriana Spence, two, who is the apple of his eye.

Credit is due Wilson, who made it possible for both of his daughters to graduate from St. Augustine College in Raleigh.

"I'm proud of that," he says. "But there were times when I didn't know where the money would come from to keep them in school." In this, he was encouraged and advised by the late Charles Krummell, manager of the hotel.

"Sometimes I'd be so discouraged and Mr. Krummell would say, 'Wilson, don't give up, don't worry, the money will come somehow.' And it always did."

His philosophy of life sustains him always. "People mean a great deal to me. It doesn't cost anything to be nice. Sometimes I get so happy seeing the same people come back here year after year, that I just feel like giving them a squeeze when I see them coming in."

And when the plush Cavalier Oceanfront is erected this Fall, it won't, no matter how superlative, replace the original Cavalier in Wilson's affection.

"Why, just driving down Atlantic Avenue and looking up at that beautiful building standing so proud, makes me think it's the greatest thing anywhere."

Then, will he be part of the picture at the new establishment? "I'll go if I have to," he says, "but this is home to me-part of me is right here."

The beauty of the sunken gardens delighted many a Cavalier guest before the parking lot replaced them.

Carlos Wilson remembers them as... "the prettiest gardens I ever saw."

Earliest days of The Cavalier, with a profusion of Marmons, Model T Fords at the entrance. Julia Nelms, sales director of the hotel remembers traveling from Norfolk to The Cavalier in a Model T. "It was expected and never failed to happen that we had a flat tire before we got there. We hoped it would happen in the shade, then we'd take out the fried chicken and have a picnic while the tire was changed."

Look For The Humorous In Each Experience

BY REV. JOYCE KRAMER

Are you often subject to the blues - to feelings of despondency, hopelessness and depression? Indulgence in such feelings leads to illness, so-called nervous breakdowns or even violent behavior.

Deliberately cultivate good humor. Look for the humorous side of your experience. Good humor conquers problems, keeps you in better health and assures more satisfying as well as rewarding relationships.

Good humor expressed in laughter is a good tonic. Spontaneous, unrestrained laughter releases nervous tension, relaxing you both physically and mentally, thus lifting your spirits.

Jesus, who came to show man the way to an abundant life, emphasized joy. Should we too not show forth the joy that comes when we recognize God in us - the Source of all good?

I GIVE THANKS THAT I AM DEVELOPING MY SENSE OF HUMOR SO THAT I MAY MORE FULLY EXPERIENCE TRUE JOY IN LIVING.

Tigers Celebrate Successful Season

THE FEARSOM FOURSOME OF THE TIGERS, composed of Cokie Brown, Lee Phillips, Bobby Malvin and Roger Griffin found excitement and challenge on a rubber raft.

Members of the Lynnhaven Bronco Minor League team Tigers, celebrated their successful season over the weekend with a pool party and a cook-out.

The team compiled a 10 and 4 record for the season before losing the championship playoffs to the Yankees.

Team Mother, Mary Lett and her husband Ray invited the boys and their parents to their home on Mars Street for an afternoon in the pool and a picnic.

As the pictures show, the players were as enthusiastic in the water as they were on the baseball diamond.

The team manager was John Griffin and Coach was James Brown.

A JACKKNIFE, OR REASONABLE FACIMILIE, is performed by Malvin as admirers Tom Nuss, and Lee Phillips (in the Pool) and Meyer Griffin along with Pat Lett stand by in admiration. Buddy Brown awaits his turn on the board.

A MAKESHIFT DIVING PLATFORM was made out of the rubber raft and teammates, James Austin, Bobby Melvin and Mike Lett hold the raft as Roger Griffin prepares for a dive. Tom Nuss watches from beneath the sliding board.

JIMMY AUSTIN IMPROVISES A DIVE as Mike Lett and Cokie Brown await a turn on the diving board.

WHEN THE CHOW BELL RANG Mr. Ray Lett was found serving hamburgers and hot dogs to the team members and parents.

THE UMPIRE Ann Rasberry, who served as plate umpire and base umpire for a number of the Tiger games was caught in a usual position of leaning over the shoulders of some of the players. Mike Lett and Robie Perna.

THERE WAS NO SHORTAGE OF FOOD as Rick Lett, one of the Tigers' most faithful fans, James Austin, Cokie Brown, Tom Nuss and Lee Phillips crowded around one side of the table.

ON THE OPPOSITE SIDE OF THE TABLE were Buddy Brown, Mike Lett, Roger Griffin, and Robie Perna.

FAITHFUL FANS OF THE TIGERS included Pat Lett and Meyer Griffin who spent some time tensesing umpire Ann Rasberry about a couple of her "low ball" calls during the game.

Beach Hosts Change Of Command

During ceremonies at the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base July 1st, the U.S. Navy transferred one of its dock landing ships to the Spanish Navy.

The U.S. Navy decommissioned the USS San Marcos (LSD-25) after 26 years service and Rear Admiral James O. Cobb, Commandant Fifth Naval District signed it over to the Spanish Navy.

Accepting in behalf of Spain was his Excellency Jaime de Arguelles, Spanish Ambassador to the United States.

The ship was renamed the T.A. Galacia and will be used as an attack transport. The Galacia, under the command of Captain Adolfo Gregorio A. Espino, Spanish Navy, will have a crew of 16 officers, 27 chief petty officers and 221 enlisted men.

The Spanish crew arrived in June to undergo training aboard the San Marcos and will depart later this month for home.

The ship is named for a geographical area of Spain in which their largest naval base, Ferrol is located.

The San Marcos, commanded by Commander Henry C. Boschen, Jr., USN, was named after the Castillo de San Marcos, an old Spanish fort situated in the city of St. Augustine, Fla.

Heading the list of prominent military and civilian guests attending the transfer ceremony was Admiral Charles K. Duncan, Commander in Chief, U.S. Atlantic Fleet.

Principal U.S. speaker was Vice Admiral E. Edwin Bell, Commander Amphibious Force, U.S. Atlantic Fleet.

Local Boy In Program

The subject of large animal biology received the undivided attention of 24 rising high school seniors recently at Virginia Tech.

The seniors, all of whom were from Virginia, attended the department of dairy science's large animal biology program. Among them was Timothy F. Brown, 405 Davis St., Virginia Beach.

During the week the students learned about many topics concerning large animals from animal specialist. The subjects included blood typing, artificial insemination, animal genetics, computer science, cells and milk synthesis, rumen physiology, nutrition and the inter-relationships of all aspects of animal biology.

William M. Eigen, professor of dairy science and program director, said the students participating in the weeklong program were selected on the basis of their academic standards and their interest in the areas of large animal biology. About 50 Virginia students applied for the program.

Surfboard A Surprise

The Hub's "Summer Stag Night", a preview sale event held at the Princess Anne Plaza Shopping Center store, brought more than financial victory to one Virginia Beach youth.

David B. Sommers, 809 Summers Lane won the Bob White Medium Surfboard in the drawing held that evening.

"I just couldn't believe it!" Sommers repeated. He had been saving to buy his own surfboard and was preparing to stop in at The Hub to learn the winner's name, when the telephone rang with news that he had won the surfboard.

Gordon J. Suhre, store manager, said that Sommers immediately came to The Hub to claim his new prize. Sommers, 16, is the son of Commander and Mrs. C. W. Sommers, II.

The surfboard had been built by Bob White right in the Hub Store and had been on display in the store window for several weeks. The Hub, a leading men's fashion store in Tidewater, is operated by GENARCO, Inc. of Norfolk.

Best Costumes

Two hobes and a clown were the judges choices during the annual costume contest held in conjunction with King's Carnival Days at the London Bridge store. Here State Senator Edward T. Caton III

Businessman Asks City For 'Hippie' Control

A young Atlantic Avenue businessman told City Council Monday it was about time Virginia Beach stopped being a "soft touch" and clamped down on the undesirable, or hippie, element in the city.

Leigh Forbes told council that at his candy store on 21st Street and Atlantic Avenue he saw young people peddling dope, blocking pedestrian traffic, annoying passersby with "weird music" and just generally disturbing the tourists.

He said that this element is financially hurting the city because it is driving tourists away and, claiming that he spoke for the innkeepers and other Atlantic Avenue merchants, Forbes said "We've had it!"

Council did not take action on his request for strict controls on these young people, perhaps laws to bar them from the city altogether, but took Forbes comments under advisement for further consideration.

In other action, council: * Approved Dr. R. Roy Jarrett Jr.'s use permit for 12 apartments on Pacific Avenue adjacent to Galilee Episcopal Church;

* Approved, subject to city sewage, Skico's application for change of zoning and use permit to operate a kennel (Maximum of 14 dogs) in addition to the existing recreation facility at Thalia Creek;

* Denied John B. James' change of zoning and variance from the Planned Unit Development minimum acreage from 50 acres to 18.9 acres on property in the Avalon Terrace area;

* Approved Expressway Construction Company's use permit for a gasoline station at the northwest intersection of Holland Road and Edwin Drive;

* Approved a use permit for Robert B. Cromwell Jr., William

E. Culverhouse and Kenneth N. Whitehurst Jr. to build a professional office at the northwest corner of Independence Boulevard and Lakeside Road;

* Approved 10-1, with Reid Ervin opposing, use permit for Pembroke Meadows to build 90 townhouses at the northwest corner of Pembroke Boulevard and Cathedral Drive;

* Approved 9-2, with Ervin and Floyd Waterfield opposing, a change of zoning to multi-family residence for Doris Morrison on property at the southwest corner of Barberton Drive and 24th Street;

* Approved 8-3, with Ervin, Robert Callis and Earl Tebault opposing, DeHart Construction Corporation's change of zoning to rural residence District 3b on 24.35 acres in Tranterwood Shores area (the opposition was based on the possible effect some 21 homes might have on polluting the Lynnhaven River);

* Denied John S. Waller's change of zoning and use permit to build 300 apartment units at the northwest corner of Wolf-slane Road and Eastern Shore Road;

* Denied Gabor, Inc.'s change of zoning and use permit to build a 252-unit mobile home park in Seatack; and government or the Court system."

* Approved the City's use permit to operate a parking lot at the Virginia Beach Convention Center.

It was prompted by statements of Norfolk Mayor Roy B. Martin, Jr. and Toy Savage, Jr. Norfolk School Board attorney, that consolidation of Norfolk and Beach public schools might be approved by the courts at some future date.

A surplus of $499,461.27 was reported in the End-of-year financial statement.

School Board Chairman J.W. Buffington explained that this cannot, in fact, be considered an actual surplus.

"Sometimes there's a misunderstanding when money is returned to the City. It doesn't mean that the budget was padded. On the contrary, it is money happily received that wasn't expected."

The special August 17 meeting set for consideration of school schedule changes, necessitate when funds were reduced for Fall operation, was tentatively changed to September 14, at 7:30 p.m. It does not replace the regular meeting.

School Supt. E.E. Brickell said that additional time was necessary in the light of conflicting school census figures which differed from those of the 1970 U.S. census. It was agreed to allot funds for the services of an Old Dominion University demographer to obtain an accurate count of school children between six and 19.

At the meeting, Buffington was reelected chairman and George C. Lyon vice chairman.

The Board created a board of review of two persons to assist schools in setting up savings accounts for money accumulated through school projects.

This prompted Dr. Roy A. Woods to remark, "If money is accumulating through school activities, maybe the fees being asked are too high."

In other matters, the Board agreed to minimum wage for bus drivers taking children on field trips, and to advertise the sale of surplus school buses on "as is" basis.

Mrs. Reva Kelberg was reelected director to Hampton Roads Educational Television Association, Inc.

The Board gave Brickell authority to transfer employees with in the system.

Charles Flynn was appointed art coordinator for Beach public schools. John Cauthen was appointed assistant principal of administration at Princess Anne High School.

Dr. Ashman Directs New Hospital

June 14th witnessed the opening of a new and different kind of psychiatric hospital in the Tidewater area. The Tidewater Psychiatric Institute is a 50-bed private mental health center offering a comprehensive program of diagnostic, consultative, and treatment services to adults and adolescents. The new hospital, owned by a group of local psychiatrists, is open to all psychiatrists upon application for treatment of their patients.

Dr. Stuart Ashman of Virginia Beach, Medical Director of the new hospital, noted that Tidewater Psychiatric Institute will be providing vitally needed treatment services which have not been previously available in the Tidewater area. It will be the first psychiatric hospital to offer extensive intermediate-inpatient treatment. This will provide care for those patients who otherwise would have to be hospitalized out of this area. It will also provide diagnostic, and short term (acute treatment) care to meet the growing needs for these services in our community.

Tidewater Psychiatric Institute is also bringing a new treatment approach to the Tidewater area. Dr. Ashman stated that treatment in the Institute is centered around "the therapeutic community". The therapeutic community is the use of a highly structured social environment to treat personality problems. Though new to Tidewater, this concept has been used successfully in other psychiatric hospitals in this country and abroad.

Dr. Julian Selig, Clinical Director of the new facility, described the treatment program of the hospital as a therapeutic community inhabited by three subcommunities or teams. There are currently three treatment teams; an intermediate team for patients requiring treatment for a few weeks or months; an acute team for evaluation and treatment for a few days or weeks; and an attending physician's team for patients who wish to continue to treat their hospitalized patients within a structured psychiatric milieu.

The basic treatment orientation for the intermediate and acute team is psychodynamic group therapy.

Victim Identified Because Beach Woman Became 'Involved'

By Les Lehigh

"There is no doubt, this is my grandchild. She was born right in this city of Solingen."

That statement last Thursday from a German woman, who wept as she spoke to the editor of the "Solinger Tagblatt" in Solingen, Germany, established the identification of a young girl who died from injuries received three weeks earlier in a motorcycle accident in Virginia Beach.

The identification of Dagmar Eickenberg by Mrs. Kira Schmand was made on the basis of a photo of the young girl and information concerning her background which was made public through the untiring efforts of Mrs. W.E. Hudgins, Sr., of Alanton in Virginia Beach.

Young Dagmar remained in a coma at Virginia Beach General Hospital from the night of the accident until her transfer to the Medical College of Virginia hospital in Richmond, Va., on July 12. She succumbed to injuries the next day, without ever regaining consciousness.

Efforts by Virginia Beach police, directed by Sgt. K.A. Helangia and officer L.A. Silva, to establish her identity were to no avail. This investigation, which was conducted throughout 18 states and was about to be launched throughout Europe by means of the Army publication "Stars and Stripes," failed to locate any relatives or friends.

Mrs. Hudgins said she was "moved by the story of her death, but nobody claimed her body" and decided to see if she could do anything to identify her.

News items concerning the girl, who for the lack of better identification was referred to as "Debbie," indicated she listed Solingen as her place of birth on an application for a work permit some weeks ago in Virginia Beach.

While Mrs. Hudgins has resided in Virginia since 1947 she was born in Koblenz, Germany, a short distance from Solingen. This fact gave her a fluent knowledge of the German language and prompted her to write officials in Solingen in hopes of establishing Debbie's identity.

(On July 16 Mrs. Hudgins wrote to Mayor Heinz Dunkel in Solingen "telling of the girl's body here in the morgue and no one to claim her" pleading with Dunkel to assist in locating relatives or establishing her identification.

Mayor Dunkel was supplied with a copy of "Debbie's" work permit application photo, along with facts that she listed her date of birth as July 11, 1950 and that during her stay in Virginia Beach the girl had used a number of family names including Brama, Brahma and Burama, quoting local authorities with saying indications were that she may have been the daughter of a military family.

A search of Solingen birth certificate records by Dunkel failed to be of any assistance. He then turned to housing authority records. Under German law records are maintained showing the names of occupants of dwellings, and their date of relocation to a new address.

These records enabled Dunkel to establish "Debbie" as possibly being the daughter of Gerd and Gisela Eickenberg. Records also showed the Eickenbergs left Solingen on Dec. 30, 1959. While authorities felt they had come to the United States, there was no concrete evidence that they had immigrated to another country.

Returning to birth certificate records Dunkel established a

Mrs. Schmand appeared in the newspaper office the next day to identify "Debbie" as her granddaughter Dagmar Eickenberg, and produced a photo taken during a wedding reception in August 1963 which showed Dagmar with her mother and sister. After convincing the editor of Dagmar's true identity she stated she "definitely would like for her granddaughter to be put to rest" adding that her daughter (Dagmar's mother) was now living in Flushing, N.Y.

To further substantiate her story a reporter accompanied Mrs. Schmand to her home in Grafath on the outskirts of Solingen where, according to Mrs. Schmand, Dagmar was born and raised for the first four years of her life, until her family moved to the United States.

Mrs. Schmand said the Blue Marlin A Va. Record

By Jay Brumbley

A 511-pound blue marlin was landed Tuesday morning by Ted Alcus fishing aboard Dick Fentress' Redfin III, eclipsing the Virginia state record for blue marlin of 454 pounds.

Ted Alcus, visiting Virginia Beach with his family, is from New Orleans, Louisiana, and is an avid sports fisherman. Ted, with his two sons, Gregory and Darren, set out with Captain Fentress from the Virginia Beach Sport Fishing Center at Rudee Inlet looking for a blue marlin.

Their target first struck about 50 yards off stern, was hooked, and made a 180 degree turn and raced away, emptying the 500 yard reel. The champion marlin then turned toward the boat, running and greyhounding, make at least 15 jumps. Before the big fish was landed two hours later, he emptied the reel three more times, putting up a tremendous fight that would have defeated any sport fisherman.

The marlin was hooked inside the Gulf Stream in about 25 fathoms of water 50 miles offshore in the Southeastern Cigar area. He was caught on 100 pound Andy tournament line using an International 80 rig.

Back at the dock, Vernon Stevens, Chairman of the Judges of the Virginia State Fishing Tournament, proclaimed the giant blue marlin a new state record. Ed Whitehurst, head of the city's Bureau of Weights and Measures, officially gave the weight of 511 pounds.

Ted, the owner of an investment brokerage firm, says that he plans to have the fish mounted, but he agreed to leave it on display at Rudee Inlet until the end of the 1972 sports fishing season. After that, it will go to New Orleans, probably to hang in his office.

Stars In Tourney

The Second Annual International Professional Tennis Tournament will be held at the 25th Street Public Tennis Courts this weekend, Thursday thru Sunday. Play will begin each day around noon.

Competing for the $6,000 purse, including a first prize of $1500, will be professional tennis champions from around the world. These professionals

Top independents, Howard Turner, Armistead Neely, Mike Belkin, and Kikie Steur (Czechoslovakia), will also be on hand.

Virginia Beach's For Sailors

It's all a matter of taste... which class sailboat one likes best and which bay is the preference. But chances are, come a bright, breezy Sunday, the sailors will congregate at The Narrows, between Broad Bay, where the sailing broods are the best, and Linkhorn Bay, the area's most picturesque body of water. There's no doubt about it. Virginia Beach's for sailors.

Glenn Elliott - Old-Fashioned, Flag-Waving American Patriot

By Howard Swindle

W. Glenn Elliott, 74, white-haired and bow-tied, had just finished telling about driving a Model-T Ford ambulance through the ruins of a war-torn France in 1918 and about his mule named Maude.

Elliott's experiences sounded much like those of novelist Ernest Hemingway, also an ambulance driver, during his tour in Italy. Perhaps it was these experiences, encountered cigarettes, a bar of candy or a more than 50 years ago, that led Elliott to his "labor of love"—the American Society of the Golden Horseshoe.

Navy Lieutenant Philip Heth, Elliott's next door neighbor and close friend, describes the society as "an organization dedicated to good, old-fashioned, flag-waving American patriotism."

And, if ever there was an old-fashioned flag waver, it would have to be W. Glenn Elliott, World War II ambulance driver, World War I lieutenant colonel in the Virginia State Guard and current advocate of anything patriotic.

Hanging in a prominent place in Elliott's home within earshot of Oceana Naval Air Station is a plaque from a naval evacuation hospital in DaNang, Vietnam, the hospital, along with other military and veteran hospitals throughout the world, has reaped the benefits of Elliott's flag-waving brand of patriotism. Since he founded the Society of the Golden Horseshoe in early 1966, the organization has sent more than $18,000 in cigarettes, tobacco, peanuts,

About every 10 days, Elliott gets in his nine-year-old Chevrolet for a tiring trip that takes him through Chesapeake, Suffolk, Petersburg and Richmond collecting money from nearly 100 quart jars he has placed in restaurants, small grocery stores and other businesses. It is the pennies, nickels, dimes and sometimes quarters that finance a pack of customers that finance a pack of candy or a bar of peanut butter. A GI in the Vietnam.

True to Elliott's lifestyle, every jar has a small red, white and blue flag taped to it. Elliott's den, or "office" as he calls it, is covered with small flags and boxes of jars, on a cluttered cot lies a large, faded flag. I've got to get another flag," Elliott said. "This one's getting pretty old." He flies it in front of his house every day, and he says he'll continue to fly it until the war in Vietnam ends.

Of his cross-country fund-raising trips, Elliott says, "We do anything and everything we can possibly do to revive patriotism in Americans." Though the American Society of the Golden Horseshoe (the name comes from an event in development of America) concerns itself primarily with servicemen overseas, it also attempts to have the flag flown from as many places as possible.

The society lists as honorary life members former Alabama governor George C. Wallace, Senator Harry F. Byrd, Jr., Virginia Beach councilman Elliott looks over some of his citations.

Frank A. Dusch and former Senator A. Willis Robertson who suggested the society's name.

One of the society's most recent campaigns revolves around gaining support for our leaders in their defense of J. Edgar Hoover and the FBI. But a talk with the society's founder leaves little doubt as to the primary aim of the society—helping the servicemen.

Elliott, a former adjutant of the Virginia American Legion, and a civil service worker, speaks proudly of his family's military service. "One of my forefathers fought in the Revolutionary War," he said. Since then, there have been relatives in the War of 1812, the Civil War, the Spanish American War, World Wars I and II, the Korean Conflict and Vietnam.

At the age of 69, Elliott exhausted all avenues trying to volunteer for duty in Vietnam so his grandson wouldn't have to go. He told a neighbor, "That's one less young man who'd be shot at—I've already lived a full life."

A small picture frame with an American flag and three rows of ribbons hangs in Elliott's den. "Those belonged to my son Jack," he says. "Raising three kids, you can be proud of is one of the most noble things a parent can do." His son, a member of a flight crew during World War II, was killed during a mission over Germany.

Elliott's campaign to send gifts to servicemen dates back to World War II when a cigarette salesman told him he could send tobacco overseas tax free. He took time off from his post as editor and business manager of the Virginia Legionnaire magazine to pass out containers for the funds.

Today, Elliott has an agreement with several tobacco companies in which they pack the cigarettes and send them directly from their factories. "Since they're sent tax free," Elliott says, "we only pay about 11 cents per pack." He has similar agreements with peanut and candy manufacturers.

To pacify one woman who was "hired against tobacco," Elliott changed the sign on his canisters from "Send Tobacco to

$4-Million In Taxes Possible

Members of city council, hoping to equalize tax assessments and at the same time gain an estimated $4 million yearly in additional revenue, met informally Monday to discuss three appraising alternatives.

Mayor Donald H. Rhodes, saying Virginia Beach is "about one-third underassessed," told go. He told a neighbor, "That's one less young man who'd be shot at—I've already lived a full life."

The special meeting was called to brief councilmen on the findings of a three-member committee appointed to investigate appraisal alternatives. Councilmen will be called upon to vote whether they favor appraisal by the city tax assessor's staff, an independent appraisal firm or by state appraisers.

Clyde Merritt, city tax assessor, told councilmen his office would need six additional appraisers and a $50,000 increase in funds to complete the reappraisals in time for reassessment by January 1, 1973.

The head of a Salem appraising service, Harold Wingate, said his firm would appraise those parcels of land not yet appraised by the city tax assessor's office, estimated at about 28,000 parcels — for $7 per parcel. Wingate's plan calls for the city tax assessor's office to furnish three appraisers to work with his nine-man staff. Estimated cost is $196,000.

Council appeared lukewarm to appraisal by state appraisers. Merritt, who said his office is due to lose two appraisers soon, said, "We (the tax assessor's office) can tackle it if I can find some qualified help. We can get it done if we have to work around the clock."

Councilman George R. Ferrell, speaking strongly against appraisal by an independent firm, said, "This is a problem that will recur every year and I think we ought to spend the money updating our own tax department."

"There's no way you can keep your own appraisers out of politics," Councilman Reid Ervin said. "The use of local people creates problems you don't have with independent appraisers."

Mayor Rhodes, also lending his support for appraisal by an independent firm, told councilmen he felt it was the best route "to get the assessments on the books by January, '73." He said the independent appraiser's results "could be checked and double-checked which would make our jobs easier."

U.S. Aid There; Whitehurst

Congressman William G. Whitehurst said Tuesday night he was surprised at the small amount of the Virginia Beach budget derived from Federal Government sources and indicated the city was not "tuned in" to additional revenue available to it.

He pointed out that only 4% percent of the budget comes from the Federal Government and "I think it should be larger," he told the Virginia Beach Jaycees during remarks at the group's Press Night.

His comments, cut rather short because of his own tight schedule, did not elaborate on specific sources available, but he said the city needs to be "tuned in" to the funds that are there and I think I can help them."

Red Wing Course To Open Fri.

The city of Virginia Beach will enter the golf business tomorrow when Red Wing Lake Golf Course opens to the public. There will be a brief opening ceremony at 9:20 Friday morning to introduce various people connected with the new course, and City Manager Roger Scott and Mayor Donald Rhodes will make brief welcoming statements on behalf of the city. At 9:30, the first foursome will tee off.

At 11 a.m. the course opens to tee off. Mayor Rhodes, City Manager Scott, Former Mayor and senior council member Frank Dusch, and Brigadier General William J. McCaddin, commander of the state National Guard, will make up this honorary foursome.

Moments later, ten other foursomes consisting of city officials and specially invited guests will tee off.

At 11 a.m. the course opens to the public. To celebrate the opening, approximately 40 foursomes will be allowed to play the course free. Jennings House, the course pro, wants to make it clear that the free rounds will be on a first come first served basis.

In order to be eligible for the free round of play, one member of the foursome must register in person at the club house between 8 and 11 a.m. Friday morning. There will be no advance or phone reservations.

A tee-off time can be selected between 11 a.m. and 3:35 p.m. (time registered, the member of the proposed foursome can leave and return with his group just prior to tee-off time.

City Employees To Provide New Car

Employees of the City of Virginia Beach are being asked, or invited, to contribute toward purchase of an automobile to be presented to retired city manager W. Russell Hatchett.

The automobile presentation will be part of "Russell Hatchett Day" ceremonies to be held in September during official dedication of the city's new golf course.

The new course, which will open July 30, is formally named the W. Russell Hatchett Virginia Beach Municipal Golf Course but is more popularly called the Red Wing Lake Golf Course.

Hatchett retired several years ago after being in Virginia Beach public service for 25 years. The drive for the new car is being conducted by a citizens group with R. G. (Pete) Boshert accepting contributions.

Guild Show Its Best Yet

The Chesapeake Art Guild, a group of "area artists whose techniques are as varied as their ability, frequently displays work at the College Park Village Gallery. Art fanciers have come to know and enjoy their efforts and to anticipate their shows.

The exhibit currently showing at College Park will not disappoint the guild's followers. It is perhaps their best one to date.

The several hundred pieces of work - oils, watercolor, sculpture, acrylic, graphic, even some crafts - are not all professionally done. Some are, in fact, quite untrained. But the combination of all talents lends charm to the exhibit rather than distract.

There are some excellent pieces of work in this show, some were selected by the judges, others were not.

Best in Show winner was Cecile J. Morris's impressionistic "Vermont Quarry". Also selected by the judge were Oils, Eslear Ott's "Eslear's Dream", first; Thomas Wasley's "Turquoise", second; and Ruth Cheatham's "Forty Shades of Green", third. Honorable mention went to Glinvera Liles.

In the watercolor classification, winners were: Cecile J. Morris's "Illusion", first; Al Leach's "Reflections", second; and "Nude No. 3" by Bill Summerlin Jr., third. Honorable mention went to Beatrice Valentine.

First place in mixed media went to Ed Liles for two miniatures: Dan Taggart's "Tower of Youth" placed second; and third went to Gracie E. Guard's "Run for Your Life". Honorable mention winner was Glinvera Liles.

Jan Robbins's animal portrait of "Herb" was top winner in the graphics, followed by Hazel Vagress' "Shells from Florida", second, and Bill Summerlin's "Farmers Daughter", third. Honorable mention went to June Bowden.

In sculpture, Lee Leach's "Chain Bird" was the lead selection. B. Callahan won second place, Bill Summerlin third and E. L. Robbins honorable mention.

Barbara Brown was cited as the Best Novice in the show.

Among some of the other outstanding works were Cecile J. Morris's "Meadow Sentinels", a starkly dramatic oil; Ruth Cheatham's oil "Roof Tops and Tree Tops"; three rich watercolors by Bill Summerlin - "Marsh", "Sea Shore" and "Boat House"; Starr L. Quinn's oil of Christ, "Forsaken"; Eslear Ott's "Deserted Beach"; Al Leach's "Spires"; Alice Immler's "Path in the Yellow Wood"; Jean Edmonds' "Cat Tails" and Glinvera Liles' "Black Eyed Susans".

The show, unfortunately, will end next week. But there's still time over the week-end to enjoy it.

Rock Outshines Country Sound

Friday was rock and roll night at the Virginia Beach Dome with two outstanding groups, Black Oak Arkansas and Allman Brothers Band plus the country rock sound of Cowboy.

The audience didn't seem too pleased with the new sound Cowboy brought forth. Of course, any new sound takes a while to wear so maybe that's the way it is with Cowboy's country rock.

THE DRUG EPIDEMIC, by Dr. Wesley C. Westman, New York, Dial Press, 1970, $4.95.

Are you familiar with "doodles," "joy pop," "mikes," and "skin popping"? These are all terms which are part of the current drug subculture, included in the glossary of this topical book on drugs.

The author, a clinical psychologist, gives a view of the kind of people who are addicts and pushers, as well as many others whose lives are scarred by drug use.

"The basis for the addiction-prone personality," he says, "is valuing things more than people, an early tendency to manipulate others verbally for selfish ends, and the absence of an ego ideal and conscience."

He discusses the family and cultural influences, along with the legal and medical aspects of drug addiction and advocates treating the causes rather than the effects of drug abuse, establishing confrontation groups, accepting the presence of community houses, and training former addicts to be counselors. Dr. Westman states the facts and does not moralize about drug use.

A list of Addiction Referral Services by state is included as a help to young people, their parents, or anyone interested in combating drug addiction.

Roy R. Whitlock, according to police, became the 18th traffic fatality of the year in Virginia Beach in a single car accident on Holland Road Saturday night.

Authorities said Whitlock, 26, of West Lane, received massive head and internal injuries when he was thrown from the auto in which he was a passenger.

The car, driven by Larry T. Altman, 29, Towanda Road, Chesapeake, reportedly went out of control while rounding a curve a half mile East of Rosemont Road.

D. C. CURRENT BY CYRENE DEAR

As we watch a double rainbow arched in the sky with the Ohio River behind us our thoughts are far away from pollution of air and river.

We were made conscious of our environmental problems when Dave Ross Stevens, special writer for the Courier-Journal and former Editor of the Gleaner-Journal, stopped by for dinner. He talked about his interview with William D. Ruckelshaus, Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Ruckelshaus said, "We have concentrated on the upper Ohio River in the last few months because that is an area of high pollution and high population density. That doesn't mean that we're not going to be doing anything else along the Ohio."

The Ohio River separated Kentucky from Indiana. The Environmental Chief is a Hoosier. He lost the U. S. Senate race in 1968 against Birch Bayh, a possible Democratic candidate for the Presidency.

Ruckelshaus, a Republican, was rewarded by President Nixon to head the newly created environmental agency. He has to tackle everything from sewage, smoke and waste to gas fumes, strip mining and dozens of other causes which affect the air we breathe.

A weekend at Kentucky Lake for a three-way family celebration July 12th included one 75th birthday, one two-year-old birthday and one wedding anniversary.

There really was no generation gap, even though there were two babies, three pre-teenagers, one seventeen-year-old, two sets of parents, and one grandmother all in one cottage.

We swam, biked, played bridge and cribbage, shared chores and conversation, blew birthday candles and opened presents. We even had a family Sunday devotion service with hymns singing.

Jokes abounded. One youngster asked his grandmother, "How come you are seventy-five years old and never ate Ketchup on a hamburger or even ate brown-sugared toast?"

The 75th birthday celebration started with a bang in Beltsville, Maryland-July 3rd. It kept right on with intermittent occasions and finally ended at a wedding reunion with old friends at Lake Mohawk, New Jersey July 24th.

It will take 76 trombones and the spirit of '76 to top it next year.

Mace And Crown Is Winner

The Mace and Crown, student newspaper at Old Dominion University, has won third place in the national Pegasus Awards contest for college newspaper advertising programs.

The newspaper shared the honor with the Michigan State News at Michigan State University.

The competition was sponsored by the National Educational Advertising Service in cooperation with the Associated Collegiate Press and the National Council of College Publication Advisers and is funded by the Reader's Digest Foundation.

The Mace and Crown received the award for a fashion supplement published in the spring. ODU's paper was the only weekly to receive a cash award, all other winners are published daily. It was also the only winner on the East Coast.

A $50.00 cash award went to Jack R. Bray, a senior from Goshen, New York, who is studying marketing. He was advertising manager at the time the supplement was published. Bray worked last summer at the Virginia Beach Sun. The Mace and Crown editor, Chuck Applebach, is working with the Sun this summer.

Fort Story Breaks All-Time Reenlistment Records

Records are being broken at Ft. Story with nearly every unit on post reporting all-time highs in reenlistments coupled with all-time lows in AWOL rates.

If "RE-UP" and AWOL statistics are a measure of morale, it must be at an all time high at Ft. Story.

The post is well on its way to the realization of an All-Volunteer Army. Eighty-one percent of the personnel at Ft. Story are now Regular Army with almost twenty percent of this figure representing draftees who have subsequently volunteered for the Regular Army. Reenlistment as a privilege has been emphasized at Ft. Story by strict application of Bar-to-Reenlistment Actions making ineligible for reenlistment soldiers whose conduct is not exemplary.

Post Commander, Colonel Lowell R. Hutson, attributes the continuing rising rate of reenlistments and declines in AWOL rates to several factors; effective efforts by unit commanders and non-commissioned officers, the presence of a knowledgeable and dedicated reenlistment staff, and implementation of the basic concepts emphasized under the new Modern Volunteer Army (MVA).

"Concern by company commanders and non-commissioned officers to the individuality of every soldier, the disallowing of permissiveness while at the same time instilling a high degree of pride in professionalism, has resulted in the retention of highly qualified soldiers," he said.

Colonel Hutson also commends the Post and Unit Career Counselors for their outstanding contributions to the Reenlistment Record. Sergeant First Class Dixon L. Walters and Sergeant Robert J. Williamson, as post Career Counselors, head

Unit Counselors who periodically interview and advise each man on post of the most opportune ways to further a rewarding Army career.

The post completed the fiscal year 1971 with 101 percent of its reenlistment goal; the 79th Transportation Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Martin A. Principe, also completed with 101 percent.

HUB Promotes Executives

Lawrence B. Levinson has been promoted to manager of The Hub at Princess Anne Plaza Shopping Center. He is replacing Gordon J. Suhre, who has been named manager of The Hub at Wards Corner.

Levinson and his wife, the former Diana Leighton, live at 2010 Abbey Road in Norfolk. They have a daughter, Stacy, 7 months.

Man Shot First Night On New Job

Police continue their search for a suspect in the reported shooting and armed robbery of a service station attendant during his first night on the job.

Officials quote Albert T. Padgett, of Norfolk, with saying his assailant pulled a gun on him about 2 a.m. on the driveway of the Kay-O-Station on Virginia Beach Boulevard and demanded his money. Padgett gave him $16.

The vandit then forced Padgett into the station office building and ordered him into a back room. When Padgett refused the assailant reportedly then said he was going to kill him, because Padgett could recognize him.

A police report of the incident shows the gunman fired one shot from a pistol, which struck Padgett on the finger.

Rescue Squad Volunteers Launch Fund Drive

The Virginia Beach Volunteer Rescue Squad will kick off its annual fund raising drive next Sunday, Aug. 1, with a goal of $34,000. The opening of the drive will be celebrated by open house ceremonies with an invitation for the public to visit Squad headquarters at 20th Street and Arctic Avenue, behind the fire station. A display of equipment used in meeting medical emergencies will be available for inspection from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This will be the 19th fund drive conducted by the Volunteers since the Rescue Squads inception in 1952. During 1970 the forty man Squad answered 2,507 calls for assistance and drove some 38,000 miles.

Services of the Rescue Squad are available to the public 24 hours a day and their modern equipment consists of three ambulances, a medium duty crash truck and a rescue boat. There is no better insurance against a sudden illness or accident than a well trained, well equipped and dedicated Rescue Squad.

The Squad is again appealing to citizens of the Beach Borough to help them reach their goal, so that they may continue to meet the ever increasing demands of the growing community.

All donations should be mailed to the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad, P.O. Box 47, Virginia Beach, Va., 23458

Keep Coming Back

Virginia Beach continues to place itself in embarrassing situations because of City Ordinances that are either unenforceable, unconstitutional or just plain ineffective in their excessive wordiness.

Scarcely a week goes by that the city doesn't get some form of poor publicity over an approved ruling. . . the anti-litter law was unconstitutional, the curfew law was unenforceable, the swimming pool ordinance was totally out of step with today's modern construction and a few other occurrences that are best overlooked.

There are so many laws on the books that even the law enforcement officers lose track of who can do what and where. Yet, they must be enforced. Even when common sense must surely tell an officer that such enforcement is, in truth, a violation of a person's rights.

The Virginia Beach Innkeepers jumped on this bandwagon this week and asked that some of these ineffectual ordinances be revised or discarded; that stronger ones be adopted to prohibit the offensive actions of the "undesirable element" that frequents Atlantic Avenue business establishments.

If all the conduct the innkeepers and merchants report is factual, there surely is a need for tighter controls. But how can one element be restricted when ordinances must apply to all people? The innkeeper spokesman said this might be accomplished through ordinances that get right to the point. And he may be right. If the law says you don't litter, you don't litter. And it doesn't take TWO anti-litter ordinances full of who and when and what and where to explain it. Yet, hopefully, it leaves room for individual compassion. If the law says you don't gang up in the streets and sprawl across the sidewalks, then you don't do it. But you can sit on benches, ledges and other usual places. This, too, hopefully, allows room for the human and individual element.

City Council cannot be expected to totally understand every ordinance that comes before them - though that would be the ideal arrangement - and must depend on the advice of the city's experts. At the rate the city is going, council would do well to digest those ordinances for some time before giving final approval. Or the laws will continue to be dumped back in council's lap for further consideration.

A Good Precedent

City Council has gone into the loan-without-interest business in an effort to financially assist the Virginia Beach Civic Chorus. The good intentions are there in loaning the worthy group the thirty-five hundred dollars but in light of the ten thousand and given the Art Association for a curator's salary and the fifteen thousand given the Little Theatre for a new building, the considerably smaller amount to the chorus could just as easily have been a grant.

Of course, the civic chorus, a hard-working group of citizens drawn from all walks of life, offered in the beginning to borrow the money from the city and pay it back by "selling" their services in concerts at city-sponsored functions. This ingenious idea fell at the wayside when the city was unable to put the chorus to work.

The city's efforts to help the chorus, the art association and the little theatre do not go unrecognized. All are worthwhile groups and contribute much in the way of advancement of the arts in this city.

Yes, the city set a precedent when it granted the art association the ten thousand dollars. But it was a good precedent, one which City Council has no need to regret. The money thus far given the culture groups has not deprived any community of sewerage lines or left any heavily-travelled street unrepaired. There hasn't been that much money involved.

Councilman Reid Ervin has suggested that perhaps the city consider including a fund for cultural projects in the annual budget. The appropriation would be there for just such emergencies as the chorus's need for baffles and risers. And when the fund is exhausted, it is simply exhausted and other requests will have to await the next budget.

This is a sound suggestion and worthy of the city manager's consideration.

No Communication

The Director of Community Services revealed last week that the city plans to construct a by-pass system near the Virginia Beach Expressway to relieve the traffic congestion at Pembroke Mall, at the intersection of Independence and Virginia Beach boulevards.

This is a plan of considerable merit. But it came to light when a group of developers attempted to obtain closure of portions of several streets for another large shopping center on Independence Boulevard.

The developers have been accumulating this land for several years and finally have it together . . . to the tune of some seven hundred thousand dollars . . . but are now in direct conflict with the city's proposed by-pass. If the city alters its plan, it will cost the taxpayer an additional two hundred thousand dollars. If the developers lose their street closure bid, a requirement for one of their largest businesses within the shopping center, they will lose the business and may lose the entire project. This, a spokesman said, would cause financial ruin.

Admittedly the city needs that by-pass more desperately than it needs another shopping center that close to Pembroke Mall. But there is a matter of ethics involved. How could the city possibly plan that elaborate loop system without making contact with the owners of the property involved? This hardly seems feasible. It is much more understandable that developers would proceed with plans for their own property without knowledge of the city's intentions. Especially since their plans had been in the making for several years before the city got into the picture.

Obviously this is a breakdown in communication. And unfortunately someone is going to pay dearly for it. A phone call or two would have been so simple. The entire matter seems so senseless.

Artists Not Welcome

To The Editor:

Have you ever tried carrying five three-foot by four-foot paintings six blocks through crowded sidewalks and heavy traffic? It isn't easy, especially when there are several adequate parking areas within a few footsteps that are not available because of the owners' hostility.

If any of the people you saw on the Boardwalk last weekend do not return to exhibit their art again, it is because of the unfortunate, unnecessary incidents like the one just mentioned.

My husband and I were on the Boardwalk for the duration of the show exhibiting paintings. From personal experience, and by talking with several artists we got to know quite well, we are aware of the pointless discomforts and attitudes that have turned away many talented people who contributed to the success of the show.

Loading and unloading artwork is a necessary chore. The paintings and sculpture are heavy and cumbersome. With the addition of umbrellas, lawn chairs and backdrop facilities, it makes quite a load. Protecting the artwork is a prime concern - frames and paintings are fragile and irreplaceable.

It took us no more than ten minutes to transfer our equipment from the car to the lawn near our exhibit area, yet we were harassed when we tried to use the parking lot of a 19th Street motel for our short purpose.

We did not intend to park in the lot, merely to unload quickly and move the car, respecting the rights of the owner. The first time we used the lot, a boy carrying a broom confronted us. It did not establish good rapport with the management. The following evening the management brought a police officer telling us to leave immediately. After a hot hard day, we and the artists involved were indignant. One of them did not return. He was a talented young man from New Jersey. Many people had admired and enjoyed his exhibit.

I could understand a feeling of resentment on the part of the hotel and motel owners if the artists were imposing, forcing themselves into the area and hurting business. But the Boardwalk Art Show is an attraction that draws people to the area from all neighboring

Defends City Ordinances

To The Editor:

In answer to J. Kelly, Jr., in your July 15th publication, I would like to say to Mr. Kelly that should he have taken time to research the minutes of the Council at the time the ordinance he refers to was passed, he would have made himself aware of the several reasons such an ordinance was passed, and I can assure him it was not for the purpose of forcing campers, to seek hotel accommodations, and certainly not to force campers into camping areas, because at the time the ordinance was passed (when Old Virginia Beach was a Town) there were no private camping areas.

Contrary to Mr. Kelly's beliefs the ordinances pertaining to house trailers, campers, sleeping in autos, etc., were passed because of the raw sewage, garbage, and trash that was usually always evident after such campers left any particular spot.

I'm certainly not knocking campers, for today one sees a different breed of camper, and his facilities are far superior in the way of self contained toilets, etc.

Still another matter is the car sleeper. He'll sleep in his car, use the street (or a public toilet) and when dawn is approaching he'll steal the milk off of your front porch and the pastries from in front of grocery stores, and generally synphon enough gas from cars in the area to hold him until the next night.

A Mother's Emotional Response

To The Editor: (In answer to the Sun Survey question of July 22)

NO! NO! A THOUSAND TIMES NO! These children aren't dumb animals to be shipped helter-skelter, in dangerous traffic, with no thought of their welfare.

A great part of the city budget goes for schooling. Now the government doesn't give a hoot if the children get the education, just the busing. And no one knows what this will do to the children of this age. Only the word busing, and they don't care anything for the physical or mental wellbeing of these kids.

Is it any wonder we're having trouble with the 18 to 22 year olds today? No one REALLY cares about them. BUS them. DRAFT them. That's the order of the children's life of today. If my child is bused to Norfolk, I'll move out of this state and into a small community where I can go get them if they are sick or hurt in school, where they are afraid to die from injuries or illness because they are too far from their doctor or hospital.

I can't drive; how could I get my child to the doctor for treatment? He could be dead before I could get to him when I would be 20 to 30 miles away. No. This isn't a dictatorship YET! But the HEW seems to think it is. Who is this group of people who dictate to all of us? They aren't elected, just appointed. Let them be elected FOR the people, BY the people, the AMERICAN way. And let's VOTE on busing.
Mrs. Jeannine Perrelli

states. Even many of the artists themselves, from as far away as Michigan and Illinois, stayed in the local motels. I cannot believe that the presence of the exhibitors hurt business. On the contrary, I would assume tourist trade increased, and a welcome or "thank you" in the form of a police officer's order to leave is not what you would call good public relations.

Upon arrival we quickly learned that we were not welcome in the hotel buildings. For two days there were no restroom facilities for the exhibitors. The portable units were delayed in arriving, and there was a dispute over where they were to be placed, apparently between show officials and motel owners. We were told we could use restrooms in several specific restaurants on Atlantic Avenue, among them "The Raven" and "Tom's" and did so gratefully, leaving the exhibits intended to walk a distance of four blocks to get a taste of what was rare hospitality from the merchants.

Many of the artists we talked to said they felt like side show performers - entertainers who were not particularly welcome in town, but accepted as a cheap form of entertainment. Considering the reception they received, it is not surprising.

This is very unfortunate, because many of them told us they would not return. Few people seemed to be aware of the work and creative energy that goes into producing a work of art. Only an artist himself can ever truly understand this, but it is not unreasonable for him to expect a little appreciation. Most of them did not even feel welcome, much less appreciated.

Nature herself offered a few unexpected hardships, with two surprise thunderstorms. Hot and humid temperatures are enough to deflate a person's tolerance. Yet these were accepted - they were unavoidable.

Attitudes, however, are something to be resented legitimately. An artist who travels hundreds of miles to offer his talent may not deserve a red carpet, but a "thank you" would not fall on deaf ears. When "thank you" comes in the form of "get out" and "don't come in!" it is no surprise to hear an artist say, "I'll never return to this flaco again."

Visitor Praises Hospital

To The Editor: (Copy of letter sent to Virginia Beach General Hospital)

I want to express my appreciation for the excellent care I received in your emergency room on the evening of Saturday, July 17, 1971.

I arrived at about 7:15 p.m. and the emergency room was very busy. I had cut my left foot very badly and was given immediate attention by the receptionist and nurses. I only waited a short while until the doctors made a preliminary examination and decided everything was under control.

I was given an estimate of how long it would be before the doctors could start working. As it turned out, the estimate was pessimistic and the doctors started before I expected them. While I waited, the nurses and male attendant checked frequently to see that I was all right and comfortable.

Upon further examination by the duty doctor, he found that I had severed two tendons. He called for Doctor Burns and continued to sew. I have no idea how many stitches were required but it was a lot! When Doctor Burns arrived, he sewed the tendons and closed the wound. He and the other doctor, nurses and male attendant did their work efficiently and with a great deal of consideration for me.

I'm now hobbling around on crutches with a cast but have had no further trouble. It is reassuring to know that Virginia Beach has excellent medical service available along with the rest of the facilities to make a pleasant vacation.
Please accept my appreciation and convey my thanks to all who were on duty. Sincerely,
Robert J. Armstrong

'LOOKS LIKE WE'VE RUN OUT OF PEP'

LET'S WELCOME YOUNG VOTERS

More than 11 million young people between the ages of 18 and 21 are now eligible to vote for the President for the first time. All they have to do is to register. When national election time rolls around in 1972, 25 million young people under the age of 25 will be eligible to cast their first vote for the President of their choice.

Rarely in the history of this nation have potential first-time voters made up so large a share of the total voting age population - nearly 1 in 5.

Hopefully, this will result in a major rejuvenation of the major parties with the injection of young and energetic workers.

It is up to our present political leadership to welcome and encourage these young Americans. They should listen and incorporate their worthwhile ideas, utilize their manpower, and encourage their dedication and participation toward a better tomorrow.

We have opened "The System" to them. Now we must demonstrate that they can work effectively within it.

The Answer's No

Last week's question really only had one side. We knew that when we asked it, of course, but it's still healthy to encourage the public to speak out on an issue. Even if it isn't controversial.

The question was: "Would you favor consolidating the Virginia Beach and Norfolk school systems, and perhaps include other communities into a Tidewater School System?"

Needless to say, the unanimous answer was an emphatic "NO".

There is a long, emotional letter from one mother in the Letters to the Editor column on this page. And here are some of the comments on questionnaires received:

"NO-but what difference does it make how we may think. It is most apparent that our betters, the judges in the courts, will make these decisions instead of our so-called representatives in Congress (who are not particularly concerned with our wishes), after all, it IS less than thirteen years to 1984!"

There were many other comments, mostly limited to "Definitely not!" and "No, no, a thousand times no!!!" But they all carried the same message. Obviously Virginia Beach citizens are sympathetic with Norfolk and other cities, but intend to protect their own.

City Council is faced with the problem of extending the present boardwalk through issuance of bonds or relying on private interests to bulkhead the property near Rudee Inlet where new motels will eventually be built. The Sun editorialized on this issue last week, but it will be interesting to see how the citizens feel.

SUN SURVEY

QUESTION: Should the city continue its development of the boardwalk to the Rudee Inlet area or turn over this responsibility to individual property owners along that stretch of the ocean-front?

Your comments and signed letters would be appreciated also.

Poem Says It

To The Editor:
I am sending this poem that will express my feelings about school consolidation.
Martin's Dream

Norfolk has its problems
Everyone knows very well.
The citizens that reside there
Will never go to hell.

They have suffered so much,
It wouldn't be quite fair
For anyone that lives in Norfolk
To have to go down there.

Norfolk has nothing, but problems
And with these they can't cope
The only thing of any size
Is the Monticello Ave.
Arena, "Scope".

Va. Beach has been given a blow
It has been said Loud and Clear
Your children are going to
Norfolk Schools

Mr. Martin and The School Board wanted you to hear.

Your children must come to Norfolk Schools
Norfolk will see to that.
Please, Virginia Beach its time to go to bat.

Unless we learn to play the game
Consolidation with Norfolk Schools will be quiet an event.

Twenty Five miles a day, your children, to Norfolk, that's where, they will be sent.

This would be the end to (Va.

have no representation.
Norfolk got you-without An-

Toastmistress Say 'Hey, Look Us Over'

By Helen Crist

"Fail for the ad man's pitch, and you'll be convinced that all women today alight down the walk, confident, cool, the epitome of "You've Come a Long Way Baby."

Easy to visualize these sophisticated females springing to their feet when confronted with a situation calling for expressing their views verbally to an audience. Moreover, we picture them delivering those ideas with absolute clarity, poise and enormous self assurance.

True? Not on your sweet life. That poise and tight control on the outside doesn't necessarily denote calmness within for these streamlined beauties nor for their average, less emancipated, less glamorous sisters either.

Truth is, the majority of women (make that men, too) do fall slightly apart at the seams when asked to deliver a speech, whether extemporaneously or after long hours of planning.

In fact, some women, so ingrained with the ridiculous notion that to be feminine is to be slightly scatter-brained, are content to remain the silent sisters who don't venture opinions on any subject.

Others, believing that women do have something to say and should be able to deliver their views in coherent, intelligent fashion, take positive action to do so.

Realizing that practice does indeed promote perfection, and that facing up to a fear, such as speaking before an audience, eliminates, in time, that fear, they've become members of a Toastmistress Club.

And in this area, the Virginia Beach Toastmistress Club is very much a vital going concern, still bursting with ideas 10 years after its beginning. In fact, Mrs. Vivian Ainley, Mrs. Billie Dierks and Mrs. Angela Coffield, charter members are still a motivating force behind the club.

This club's membership embraces women in a variety of professions: WICS, real estate, photography, many types of business, as well as housewives, who simply wish to talk before such groups as the PTA, church, clubs, with a degree of poise and confidence.

Further, their confidence in others, somehow brings about results never dreamed possible before.

They meet the second and fourth Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Atlantic Permanent Savings and Loan Association on Independence Boulevard and the Puritan Club in Kempsville, alternately.

So successful have they become, that a daytime group, an offshoot of the club is about to form, starting in September.

On August 25 at the Atlantic Permanent Savings and Loan Association, at 7:30 p.m. they'll hold a pre-planning meeting. Theme of the evening is "Hey, Look Us Over," and all those interested in either the evening or daytime club are invited to attend.

Florence Stout will give further information, at 464-9179.

Gino Counts His Toes

Gino's a cat. But not just an ordinary cat, mind you. Gino has seven toes on one front paw, six on the other and five in the back.

Most cats have five toes forward, and four in the rear. Gino, who's black and white and weighs in at 15 pounds, is the proud possession of Mrs. Leo Simon, and he lives a life of complete luxury with the family at 3105 Quimby Road, King's Grant.

An acquaintance told Gloria Simon that such cats are known as Hemingway cats. "It was told that Ernest Hemingway's cats (and he had many) all had seven toes, hence the name."

Gloria isn't real sure that's correct, and she'd welcome some information on the subject.

But Gino's life isn't all sun and fun however. There's another feline, a green-eyed beauty named Cricket, sharing the Simon household. She's a frisky playful young'un who takes great delight in pouncing on the more sedate Gino just when he's all curled up for a good old catnap.

And it's no wonder the cats are pampered pets. "They're the best shrew catchers in the business," says Gloria, who has beautiful flowers in her yard

Mrs. Leo Simon

Gino looks pretty bored with all the attention he's rating even if he is a "Hemingway cat."

Gino

"What in the world is all the fuss about? I like my seven toes."

Going Barefoot In Summer Invites Foot Problems

"Going barefoot in the summer invites special foot problems," Dr. William Thornton, President of the Virginia Podiatry Society, warned recently. "It exposes the feet to injury and infection, but proper care and common sense can reduce the hazards."

A major infection, according to Dr. Thornton, is a condition known as plantar wart. This occurs when a virus invades the sole of the foot, causing a painful growth which required professional care. The plantar wart looks like a small piece of glass or splinter, but when pinched, the area is extremely sensitive. Wearing thongs or sandals when walking on hot sidewalks or rough ground lessens chances of infection.

Athlete's foot and fungal infections of the nails are complicated by excessive perspiration. Fungus nail shows itself as a yellowish thickness at the end of the nail. Keeping feet clean and dry, changing shoes and socks frequently, and using a good foot powder will give protection from these irritating conditions.

Podiatrists also recommend wearing safety shoes with protected toes when operating power lawn mowers to prevent accidental toe amputation.

In the event of injury or ailment, consult your family podiatrist. Home remedies and commercial preparations can harm young skin and create further problems. The Virginia Podiatry Society suggests that you bathe and thoroughly dry children's feet each day, and inspect feet regularly for cracks between the toes, excessive perspiration, blisters and warts. Make proper foot care a habit by regular foot checkups.

Do You Stand Tall Physically, Mentally And Spiritually?

BY REV. JOYCE KRAMER

Would you like to travel through life boldly and successfully? You can. Stand tall—physically. Stand erect—reach higher with the top of your head.

Standing tall physically will improve your self-confidence, your poise, your attitude toward others and your enthusiasm for life. In addition, your health will be improved as the life is permitted to flow freely through your body.

Stand tall mentally. Think creatively, think big, think success. Little thoughts lead to little achievements. Think first class thoughts.

Stand tall spiritually. Be firm in your dedication to expressing your divine nature. See that wisdom, love, power and good-will are expressed in all your activities.

Stand tall, physically, mentally and spiritually and you will attain mastery over life.

1 ACHIEVE CONFIDENCE, ATTAIN WISDOM AND LIVE LIFE TO THE FULLEST BY STANDING TALL PHYSICALLY, MENTALLY AND SPIRITUALLY.

'Summertime, And The Living's Easy'

IN-SIGHT, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, THURSDAY, JULY 29, 1971—PAGE 7

IN-SIGHT

The Corn

What's so absolutely delicious as a tender ear of golden corn, straight from the field, cooked a bit, and smothered in butter? Here are cornfields of Early James, right in the heart of Oceana at Louisa Avenue, a busy spot now at the height of the corn season.

The Scale

A summer symbol of bounty is the scale awaiting the cucumbers, squash, tomatoes fresh from the farm.

The Camping

Donald V. Rickabaugh has the right idea—tie a hammock to two trees, and let the rest of the world go by. Camping at the Lazy B with him were Mrs. Rickabaugh and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel White. Son Rickey would like to go at that hammock.

Beach Boys In Canadian Wilds

Don Braun (kneeling right) demonstrates one of many first aid techniques young men learn in preparation for their trip to Canada.

A group of Virginia Beach young men are spending this week in the wilderness area of the Mississagi Provincial Park, outside Sault Ste. Marie, Canada.

The group includes Bob Dawson, Kent McGrath, Jay Nachman, Thomas Whittemore and Steve Wisniewski. They will be joining other young men from Norfolk, Portsmouth, and Chesapeake on the trip which is sponsored by the Norfolk YMCA.

During the week long period the young men, aged 12 to 17 years, will be travelling the numerous lakes around Sault Ste. Marie, by canoe, and hiking overland through the rough timberland.

While in the wilderness they will be accompanied by adult supervisors from the Norfolk YMCA, Doug Garnett and Doug Braun, and a Canadian guide well familiar with the region they will be travelling through.

Their canoes and tents are being furnished through the Canadian YMCA with each young man furnishing his own camping gear.

They will take an ample supply of food and water with them when entering the wilderness, however they will try their luck at catching trout fish to enjoy a true Canadian breakfast.

The trip was organized by John M. Long, Norfolk YMCA associate general executive, who described the trip as designed "to provide a group of boys with an experience they will long remember." Long added "a primary purpose of the trip is to build self reliance in each of the boys and to train them to work together as a team, which they will have to do on this trip."

Prior to their departure the group underwent special training at the YMCA Beach Camp on Shoreline, in Virginia Beach. Their training included water safety, canoe handling, first aid, trail blazing, map reading, and other activities necessary for their safety and enjoyment during the trip.

Bob Dawson, Jay Nachman and Tom Whitmore prepare to beach their canoe in training for their Canadian expedition.

Hawaiian Theme At Policemen's Ball

The expressions on the faces of men of the Bureau of Animal Control and their lady guests indicate the good time had by all at the annual Policemen's Ball. This happy group includes (l. to r.) Miss June Doggett, V. E. Brown, Barbara and "Duck" Reid, Rose and Bill Clark, Bobbie Caton, and Sandy and Jackie Cate.

C.F. Cummings, who acted as program chairman for the annual Policemen's Ball, and Mrs. Cummings enjoying themselves during the evening of dancing.

Princess Anne F.O.P. Lodge No. 8 turned to the Hawaiian Islands for the theme of this year's staging of the annual Policemen's Ball.

The affair, held at the Civic Center, featured Johnnie Pineapple and his South Pacific Revue. Authentic music of the islands provided a background for dancing or leisurely relaxing.

The highlight of the evening was a 45 minute presentation featuring hula dancers clad in native costume in a rendition of dances typical of the South Sea Islands.

Authentic hula dancers were a main attraction of the revue presented for the entertainment of those who attended the F.O.P. dance.

Fliers Return Home

Air Wing-Six (CVW-6) was welcomed home to Oceana Naval Air Station last Thursday following a six-month deployment to the Mediterranean on board the USS Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The trip included port calls at Barcelona and Palma, Spain; Naples and Trieste, Italy; and Athens, Greece.

Families and friends wait anxiously for their first glimpse of loved ones after a six-months separation.

"Gee, Dad, What kept you!!!"

Otters Host Virginia Swimmers

The Oceana Otters, the naval air station's AAU competitive swim team, last Sunday hosted a meet at the station's special services pool.

Swimmers who participated represented such units as the Quantico Swim Club, the Richmond River Team, Norfolk's Navy Neptunes, Barracuda Aquatic Club, James River Aquatic Club, Petersburg "Y", Hampton Aquatic Club, Portsmouth "Y", and the Greater Peninsula Swim Club.

The Otters are sponsored by Oceana NAS. The twenty members of the team are dependents of active duty and retired military personnel residing in the Oceana area.

Team members range from 9 years to 16 years of age and are proficient in freestyle, backstroke, breast stroke, side stroke and butterfly breast stroke.

As members of the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU), the team has participated in AAU meets throughout the state.

The highlight of each season is the annual Junior Olympic Swim Meet which provides stiff statewide competition.

This young lad displayed perfect form as he strived to achieve a place of honor in the "Butterfly-Breast-Stroke" competition.

Judges were kept so busy recording event results they ate lunch at their post in the judges' stand.

This photo clearly illustrates the girls were able to meet gruelly demands placed upon them in the meet competition.

Cdr. A. Fusco, who acted as official starter during competition, sends another group of competitors on their way.

Entitled "Protest and Communication," the film will be shown Monday, August 2, at 3:30 p.m. The meeting room of the Virginia Beach Dome will be the location of the showing.

"Protest and Communication" illustrates the late fifteenth century in the North, when Gutenberg's printing press came into its own and the writings of such men as Erasmus, Sir Thomas More, Martin Luther, and others spread doubts about the authority and sanctity of the Roman Catholic Church. These doubts, the Reformation, and Protestantism begin to smash the faith and power of the Church.

The series is open to the public and is being presented without charge.

Eickenberg's trip to America was made through the sponsorship of her older daughter. The July 22nd issue of "Solinger Tageblatt" reported Mrs. Schmand's identification of her granddaughter and told of her seeing Dagmar in America when she visited both her daughters in 1969. The article quoted Mrs. Schmand with saying "I can't believe this grandchild would end in death of this type."

Mrs. Schmand, according to the accounting, sent information gathered on young Dagmar to her father in Flushing, N.Y. where he is employed as a theatrical electrician.

Gerd Eickenberg contacted Virginia Beach police Sunday night and was informed the girl's body was in Richmond. He travelled to that city on Monday and made positive identification of his daughter, being assisted by the manner in which her ears had been pierced, a birth mark on her leg, unusually large shoe size, and a comparison of fingerprints with those taken at the time of her application for a Virginia Beach work permit.

Eickenberg, who also corrected her age to 16 as opposed to 21 as shown on her work permit application, indicated that his daughter left their home approximately 15 months ago to locate a friend in Virginia Beach.

During her stay in the resort city Dagmar apparently drifted from address to address, making friends frequently. Indications are that on the night of July 1 she accepted a ride with a friend on a motorcycle, and was critically injured when the cycle was struck by a truck. She received massive head injuries.

While she discussed the steps which lead to Dagmar's final identification Mrs. Hudgins reviewed clippings of the "Solinger Tageblatt" coverage of the story, and letter of appreciation she received from the newspaper's editor thanking her for the effort she made.

She was asked what prompted her to initiate contact with officials in Solingen, Germany, at a time when many people would say "I don't want to be involved."

Mrs. Hudgins replied "When I read the story of her death but nobody had claimed her body I thought about my son. If he ran away from home and was dead in a strange place. It would be terrible!"

Men in Vietnam" to "Send Goodies to Men in Vietnam." "After I changed the sign, she let me put a jar in her store," he said.

He said a few gift packages sent to individuals in Vietnam have come back stamped KIA (Killed in Action) and MIA (Missing in Action).

Elliott's canisters also serve as a pretty good barometer for public opinion on the war in Vietnam. "When Lieutenant Calley was being tried, donations went up quite a bit," Elliott said. Thinking people might give more money if they were contributing to veterans in government hospitals, Elliott changed a few of his signs, emphasizing the veteran. "Those canisters with Vietnam written on them drew quite a few more donations than the others (those emphasizing the veteran)," Elliott said.

"You'd be surprised how many (jars) are tampered with," Elliott said. "Some are gone. Some are broken. I'm sometimes lucky if a third aren't broken or stolen."

Occasionally when he packs a box of gifts for men in Vietnam, Elliott encloses a letter asking the GI's to write businessmen who have allowed him to put canisters in their stores. "That's just so they (businessmen) will know the money is going where I say it's going," Elliott said. As treasurer of the society, he keeps records of incomes and expenditures which he makes available to members periodically.

"About 90 per cent of our dues goes for sending items to Vietnam," Elliott said. "Postage is one of the big things."

Though Elliott won't admit it, his travel expenses every 10 days are another big expense—an expense not completely covered by donations. "Oh, I dip into my jeans every once in a while," he said. "I've got clothes to wear, food to eat and a place to sleep and I just thank the Lord that I can spend my time doing something to help, however small it might be."
